Janet Hart Leonard, author of "From the Hart: Two Decades of Columns, Kindness, and Kitchen-Table Wisdom," a book on Christian living, chats with Valerie Juillerat on the set of "Faith Written Forward."

Woman's gardening business opens for the season

New TV show celebrating Christian authors to debut next week

Networked through previous Taylor University writing conference attendance

By Cathy Shouse

Valerie Juillerat is proof a person can take deep heartache and turn it into encouragement for others. After writing of her personal tragedy as a book author, she recently founded a television show, "Faith Written Forward," which will debut Monday, June 1.

Juillerat has local ties to Grant County, since she co-ran a business from about 1994 to 2007 while living in Marion. At the time, she was Valerie Rigdon. She now lives in Fort Wayne and is Founder and CEO of the International Christian Book Awards and Faith Written Forward TV show.

One of the influences on Juillerat's journey has been attending the Taylor University Professional Writers Conference, an annual event on the Upland campus.

"I have attended the Taylor University Writing Conference the last three years and actually had the opportunity last year to teach a workshop on Tax Tips for writers," she said. "I met Janet {Hart Leonard} there last year and was in one of her workshops. I was given the opportunity to speak from the stage about the International Christian Book Awards and then Janet approached me about meeting up sometime for coffee."

Fast forward to a series of events that resulted in Leonard's book, "From the Hart," (released in March) winning an International Christian Books Award. Leonard was then interviewed for the TV show.

However, it was in 2024 that Juillerat's book, "Finding Hope When Storms Don't Cease," was released and started the media wheel rolling for her. Her book was co-written with David M. Rigdon and Austin V. Rigdon.

"After publishing my memoir, I won the International Impact Book Award. Going through that experience as an award-winning author, I felt led to start a book award program specifically for Christian authors to honor and elevate them. To not just give out an award, but to walk with them in their journey after publishing. So I founded the International Christian Book Awards."

Winning her award led Juillerat to speak on a podcast, which led to an interview on VisionTV. She was offered a spot on their broadcast network for her own show featuring Christian authors.

"Every piece of this puzzle has been put together and led by God," she said. "I've just been following his lead and walking through the open doors. The one thing that He put on my heart after seeing the impact that my own story was having on people, was that I had to help others get their God stories out too. Jesus taught in parables and there was a reason for that. Stories can change lives!"

She and husband Tim live in Fort Wayne and own a tax firm with offices in Huntington and Fort Wayne. She's a Huntington University graduate.

Her faith has carried her through her struggles. "Both of my Grandfathers were pastors, and I accepted Christ at the age of nine. All I ever wanted to do as child on up was to serve Him and lead people to know Him the way I did. Without my faith, I don't know how I could have gotten through the season of life that I did when I lost my dream home, my dream business and both of my, then, teen sons got into the world of drugs and alcohol. My book shares how He got me through some of the unimaginable.

"He promises us in Jeremiah 29:11 'For I know the plans I have for you,' declares the LORD, 'plans to prosper you and not to harm you, plans to give you hope and a future.' (NIV). That was the verse that I held on to.

"We say that the book awards and the TV show is a mission in motion," she continued. "We are stepping forward into a calling. A calling to share the good news that there is a hope and a future when you have Him to walk you through life's storms. We all go through hard things, and we all have a choice as to how we respond to the adversity. Sharing my story and the stories of others is my way of overcoming one step further. We are looking for partners who believe in what we are doing to help us keep it on the airwaves and keep it free to the authors."

The show can be found weekly on VisionTVNetwork on digital streaming platforms like Roku, AppleTV, FireTV, Samsung and YouTube. The first episode airs Monday, June 1st at 3:30 pm Eastern. For more information: internationalbookawards.com

Lou Rae Rumble's painting class at the Fairmount Public Library has closed for the summer. Her seasonal business, known as Lynch Country Market, has now opened.

Thursday afternoon she was working on arranging her plants she will have for sale.

"It's named in honor of my grandparents, who started this farm over 100 years ago," Rumble said. "I've been here, at the corner of Wheeling Pike and 500 East, out of Jonesboro, for four years. I started with my grown vegetables and some flowers."

Rumble, who is a Master Gardener, has expanded her offerings over the years as she's gotten to know her customers.

"Now I not only have hanging baskets, but include annual flowers, perennials, succulents, a few shrubs, vegetable plants, and house plants," she said. "I will custom make pots for you, offer helpful tips on growing, and share my passion of plants. As my vegetables ripen I will have my wonderful tomatoes, onions, green beans, and more."

Lynch Country Market hours: Wednesday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Closed Monday and Tuesday.

YOUTH FIRST: Is your child suffering from “Digital Overload?”

By Camryn Cater,
Youth First, Inc.

Technology. It’s everywhere, woven into the fabric of our daily lives, influencing how we work, communicate and live. While the use of technology can be beneficial to children, it can also have negative effects. Excessive screen time can impact children cognitively, academically, physically, socially, behaviorally, and mentally.

As our world evolves, technology is reducing real-world interaction, creating continuous stimulation and exposing children to harmful content at increasingly younger ages. Our technology-driven world is physically altering children’s brain chemistry, creating many risks during critical developmental years. Therefore, parents and guardians need to take steps to create a safer environment and promote a healthy balance for kids.

Children are often introduced to tablets, iPads, iPhones, and apps like YouTube long before they enter kindergarten.

Because the early years are critical to cognitive and social development, the experiences children have during this time can strongly influence their future success. Although technology can improve classroom efficiency and provide valuable educational support, excessive use may hinder a student’s ability to develop essential learning skills.

High exposure to technology can significantly contribute to lower academic achievement. The instant gratification provided by digital devices and media may shorten children’s attention spans, making it more difficult for them to concentrate on slower-paced or less stimulating tasks. In addition, constant overstimulation from technology can also interfere with healthy brain development and negatively impact memory, focus, and critical thinking abilities. Without these essential foundational skills, students may struggle to meet academic expectations and perform successfully in school.

Increased technology use can also lead to physical health problems. Children are spending less time playing outdoors, engaging in imaginative play, and participating in physical activity. This shift has contributed to increased rates of obesity among children and teens. Another concern is prolonged exposure to blue light, which can cause eye strain and sleep disturbances.

Technology also impacts children socially. With fewer in-person interactions, school may be one of the only places children socialize face-to-face with peers. Children who spend excessive time on devices may struggle more with conflict resolution, empathy, and basic social interactions. Social media further complicates this by exposing children to highlight reels of influencers, celebrities, and peers. Constant comparison can lead to lower self-esteem, which may contribute to mental health struggles such as anxiety and depression.

Overconsumption of technology can also increase the risk of cyberbullying. Children now communicate with peers at all hours of the day, allowing them to hide behind screens and act unkindly, sometimes anonymously. Children may see posts showing events they were not invited to or may be included in group messages they do not want to be part of. They may also be exposed to information that is not age appropriate.

How can parents avoid digital overload in their children? First, establish clear, consistent boundaries around screen time (such as no screens allowed in bedrooms, at the dinner table, or after a certain time). Involve your kids in creating a family media plan, which makes rules around screen time feel like a shared agreement rather than a punishment.

Parents should also model healthy screen-time habits in their own daily lives. Encourage alternative, non-digital hobbies such as reading, playing board games, crafting, playing sports, and engaging in outdoor activities. In addition, parents should guide children toward interactive or educational content rather than passive scrolling. Whenever possible, co-view media with your kids to promote discussion, engagement, and meaningful family interaction.

Parental control tools and software can be used to block inappropriate content and set screen time limits. And most importantly, have open conversations with your kids about why limits exist and to “pause, think and report” when they encounter disturbing content or someone acting inappropriately online.

For more specific age-appropriate guidelines, consider the 3-6-9-12 rule to guide your approach: No screens before age 3, no consoles before age 6, no internet before age 9, and no social media before age 12.

The students, who are all also enrolled in the CSA Arts Academy, attended the conference with the International Thespian Society troupe at the Marion Community School of the Arts.

Two other troupe members who attend other schools also earned Superiors: Aria Barmes, in Musical Theatre Solo, and Jasper Southerland, in Costume Design

The Thespy competition, presented by Disney Live Entertainment, celebrates the work of theatre students, giving them the opportunity to receive constructive feedback on prepared theatrical material, technical designs, plays, and short films, and recognizing their achievements on local, regional, and international stages. High school students who earn Superior ratings at the state level qualify to compete at the International Thespian Conference.

In addition to this chance to showcase their talent and skill and receive professional feedback, the state conference also offered students the opportunity to participate in workshops, attend theatre performances by fellow Thespians, and connect with peers from across the state.

The International Thespian Society is the only theatre honor society for middle and high school students in the United States. CSA's Thespians troupe is made up of qualifying members of the CSA Theatre compANY, a premier training program open to kids around the region, ages 10 to 18.

CSA Theatre compANY provides students with hands-on experience both on stage and behind the scenes. From performance to theatre production and design, the Theatre compANY program helps students develop the skills and confidence to succeed in all aspects of theatre. In addition to top-tier training, the Theatre compANY stages three to four full-scale productions each season, providing thought-provoking and engaging theatrical experiences that inspire and connect audiences of all ages in our community. All grant opportunities align with one or more priorities identified in the Grant County Strategic Vision, including Economic Vitality, Talent Development, Quality of Place, and Quality of Life.

The Community Foundation will continue its 2026 Give To Grant grantmaking efforts with several additional funding opportunities later this year, including: Collaboration Partners Summer Grant Cycle, Leadership Partners Fall Grant Cycle, and Crowdfunding Partners Winter Grant Cycle. Organizations interested in future funding opportunities are encouraged to monitor GiveToGrant.org.

org for application timelines, eligibility details, and grant announcements.

The Community Foundation

encourages donors interested in growing future grantmaking opportunities to contribute to the Give To Grant Unrestricted Fund. Through the Lilly Endowment Inc. GIFT IX initiative, every dollar donated to the fund is currently eligible to be tripled, turning a $1 gift into $3 to support future community needs across Grant County.

These charitable dollars are permanently invested to grow over time, creating an enduring source of community support. As those investments grow, a portion of the earnings becomes available each year to award grants, respond to emerging needs, support innovative ideas, and strengthen Grant County for generations to come.
