Rolling Hill County Club: A Century of Reinvention

By Teresa LeNeave, KPI Newspaper Group

Few properties in Western Kentucky have experienced as many transformations as the land now occupied by Rolling Hills Country Club. Over nearly a century, the property has served as a golf course, nightclub, dog kennel, military housing, and ultimately one of the region's premier private clubs. Through economic hardship, war, and repeated closures, the course continually found new life before emerging as the successful Rolling Hills Country Club.

From Lakeview to Hard Times

The story began in 1927 when the property opened as Lakeview Golf Club, featuring an 18-hole golf course and an elegant clubhouse. The clubhouse quickly became known for its beauty and sophistication. Much of its exceptional interior design, furnishings, and draperies were credited to Mrs. James C. Utterback, whose refined taste guided the selection and arrangement of the décor alongside interior planner Jack Brinkley.

Despite its promising beginning, the economic hardships of the late 1920s and early 1930s forced the golf course to close. The clubhouse was converted into a fashionable nightclub, while the once-pristine fairways gradually became overgrown and neglected.

Although the nightclub enjoyed several successful years, it too eventually fell victim to difficult economic conditions. By the 1930s, its doors had closed, and the property entered another chapter.

From Fairways to Hunting Dogs

Following the nightclub's closure, the clubhouse became headquarters for Ruel Brummett, a wealthy McCracken County businessman known for raising and dealing hunting dogs on a large scale. The surrounding grounds were transformed into kennels, replacing golfers with rows of barking hunting dogs.

Golf Returns

Golf returned to the property in the late 1930s when the Noble

Park Playground Association leased the Lakeview course until nearby Paxton Park could be completed.

In 1937, the course hosted the first tournament that would eventually become the prestigious Irving Cobb Golf Championship. During its first three years, however, the event was known simply as the Tri-State Amateur.

When Paxton Park opened, Lakeview once again fell into disrepair. The 400-acre property, owned by the Guthrie Estate, gradually returned to a wilderness state as trees, brush, and erosion reclaimed the course.

US moves to shut a Kentucky organ donation group, citing safety failures

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
AP Medical Writer

The Trump administration said Wednesday it will shut down a Kentucky organ donation group accused of continuing plans for organ retrieval from some patients who unexpectedly showed signs of life.

While those surgeries were canceled, the cases made headlines several years ago, prompting a spike in people around the country revoking their organ donor registrations.

Health Secretary Robert F. Kennedy Jr. called the nonprofit Network for Hope “a bad apple” and accused it of “persistent safety failures” in announcing the government was starting the process to decertify it.

Network for Hope is one of about 55 organ procurement organizations, or OPOs, that coordinate the recovery of organs from deceased donors and help match them to patients on the nation’s transplant list. In a statement, Network for Hope said it “strongly disagrees” with Kennedy’s decision and will appeal.

Among the allegations is that in 2021, Network for Hope’s predecessor organization pressured a local hospital to proceed with plans to withdraw life support and retrieve organs from a man despite signs that he was waking up from a drug overdose. The man survived and his sister joined Kennedy at a press briefing Wednesday, thanking him.

OPOs cannot declare

if someone is dead — only a doctor at the hospital treating the person can do that. Only after that declaration can a donor agency assume responsibility for the deceased, looking for potential recipients and scheduling surgeons to come in to retrieve the organs. Most donations come from people declared brain-dead. But sometimes doctors say a patient has a nonsurvivable injury and the family decides to withdraw life support — and in certain circumstances, that also can allow for donation.

In its statement, Network for Hope said it complies with all federal organ policies.

It said that over a year ago it implemented a “first-of-its-kind” new safeguard allowing anyone — including health professionals or family members — to call a pause in donation planning if there’s any concern the patient won’t be appropriate.

Kentucky recently passed a law mandating that pause and the federal Organ Procurement and Transplantation Network is working on new rules that also would require all the nation’s OPOs to implement it.

More than 100,000 people are on the U.S. transplant list, the vast majority seeking a kidney, and thousands will die waiting for a new organ. There were more than 49,000 transplants last year, a record despite a small drop in donations from the deceased — the first such dip in a decade.

Back-to-school clothing giveaway a gospel opportunity for Elm Grove Baptist

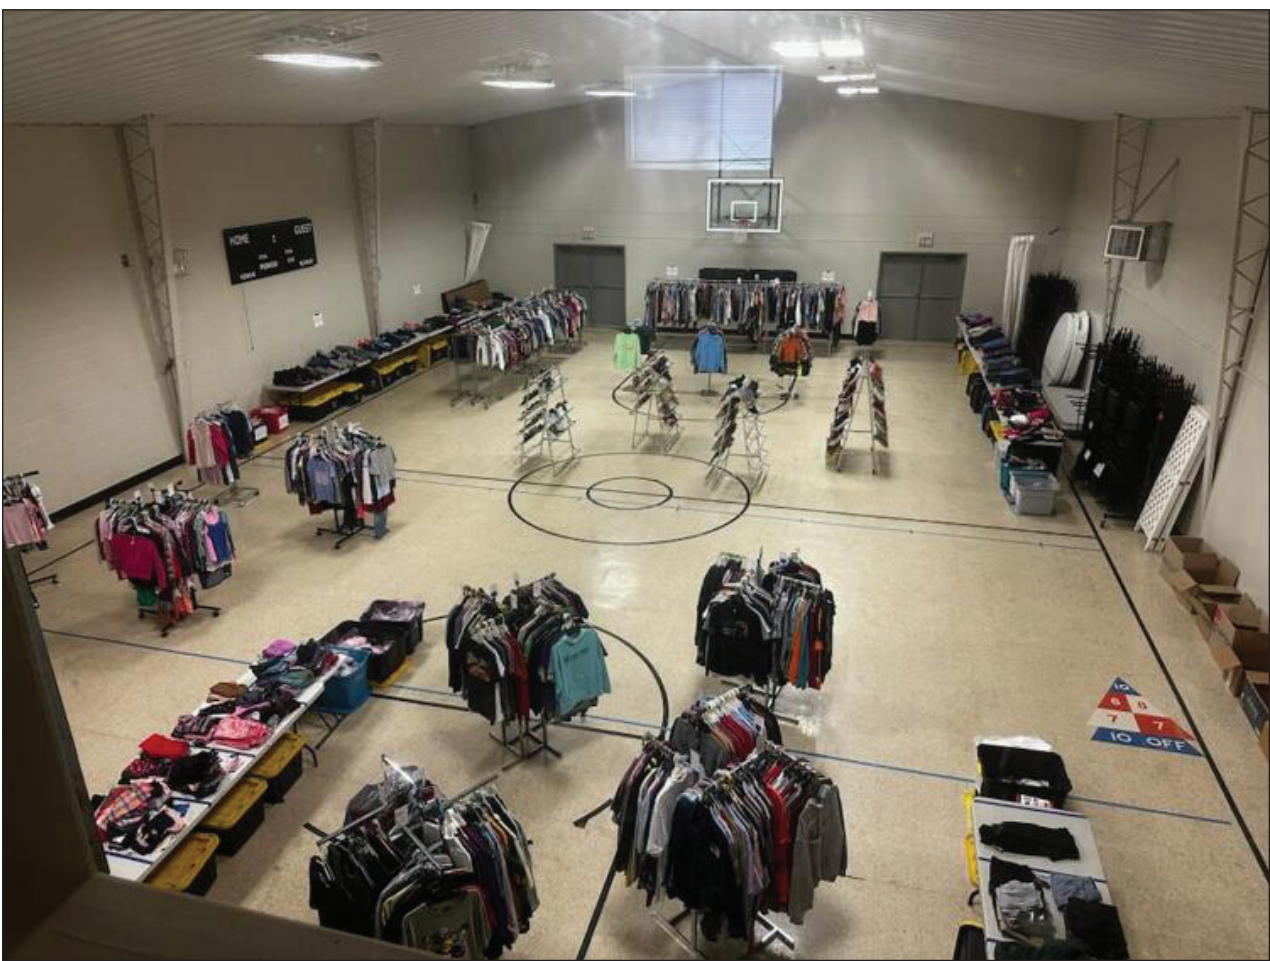

By CHIP HUTCHESON
Kentucky Today

MURRAY, Ky. (KT) — A much-larger-than-usual crowd showed up for a back-to-school clothing giveaway July 26 at Elm Grove Baptist Church, enabling the church to have a significant gospel opportunity with every family at the event.

Pastor Clint Gentry said 223 school-age children, from pre-school to high school, received free clothing — with each student receiving five outfits. An adult had to accompany each child.

The church has hosted the giveaway since 2018 with church members donating clothing items. Gentry was youth pastor at that time, and has been the senior pastor for the past six years.

“Our church has a lot of school teachers, and one of our teachers, Leslie Ray, is the coordinator. She and some teachers wanted to help kids — other churches were doing school supplies so those needs were being met. But other needs, like clothing, were not being met,” Gentry recalled.

That first giveaway attracted a large crowd, but in recent years the number declined, especially during Covid. Last year there were slightly less than 100 students served, but this year there was a dramatic increase.

“It was from 1-3 p.m., but we probably had 50-75 people lined up in front of the church at 12:45,” Gentry said.

“I said, ‘Wow, this is awesome.’ I got a speaker and started telling people the gospel. I told them, ‘Today we are blessed to be able to gift you — these are free — you get a certain amount of clothing per kid.’

My segway was, ‘we want to give these to you freely because they reflect the free gift of salvation that Christ has given to us.’”

The church had its gym set up like a clothing store where people could enter and see the clothing offered. “We had people helping in that process. And every family got a goody bag that contained hygiene items and other things. In that bag we would give each family a gospel tract. On the way out we tried to target people and ask if they needed any help. We were able to have private (gospel) conversations with them.”

Gentry said at least 25 church members were on hand to help people in the distribution, and said many church members contributed clothing.

“Our church as a whole was blown away,” Gentry said of the event. “We had enough clothing, but there were some sizes we didn’t have so we have extended past that (July 26) date. All last week we were working with our entire church family to meet the needs of some of the kids who came late. We’ve been able afterwards to meet those needs.”

SCHOOL BUS SAFETY TIPS

- 1. PLAN A SAFE ROUTE - Whether your child walks to school, rides a bike or strolls to the bus stop, map out the most direct trip possible. Do an initial walk-through with your child and make sure he or she doesn’t walk alone - find a friend, parent or family member who can make the trip too.
- 2. KEEP YOUR KIDS INFORMED - Ensure your child is prepared in case of an emergency. They should know their address, telephone number and full name (for younger kids).
- 3. AT THE BUS STOP - Kids should follow these three tips: Always look for traffic before stepping off the bus. Always wait for the driver to signal you before crossing in front of the bus. Never walk behind a school bus.
- 4. BULLYING -Talk to your kids about bullying. Make sure they feel comfortable telling you or their teacher about any problems that arise. Keeping an open line of communication is essential.
- 5. AVOIDING STRANGERS - Create a plan for your child explaining what to do if a stranger approaches - especially on their way to and from school. If your child is home alone after school, consider installing a home alarm system they can easily use and discuss additional home safety measures.

FRANKFORT — The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources will host four dove quota hunts and four traditional mentor/youth dove quota hunts during the early part of dove hunting season, which opens on Tuesday, Sept. 1. Hunters must submit applications for each of these dove quota hunts and will be randomly drawn depending upon availability. Applications will be accepted through 4:30 p.m. (ET) on Friday, Aug. 21. Dove quota hunts will be held at Big Rivers Wildlife Management Area (WMA) in Union County and the Roberts Tract of Kentucky River WMA in Owen County. A hunt will be held at each location on Tuesday, Sept. 1, the traditional opening day of dove season, and again on Saturday, Sept. 5. The quota dove hunts at Big Rivers WMA run from noon-5 p.m. (CT). The quota dove hunt on the Roberts Tract of Kentucky River WMA is from 1-6 p.m. (ET). Hunters must be off the field by closing time. These fields will be closed in between the quota hunt dates to limit hunting pressure on the fields. They will open to all dove hunters starting Sunday, Sept. 6. Applications for dove quota hunts are available on the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Migratory Bird Hunting webpage. Drawing results will be posted by Wednesday, Aug. 26. Drawn applicants must print a copy of the selection page and carry it with them in the field. Drawn hunters are allowed one guest. The guest must be accompanied by the drawn hunter. Guests must also carry a copy of the selection page. All hunters must check in before the hunt and check out after. Each hunter is allowed 50 shotshells (two boxes). There will be 30 hunter slots for each quota hunt on Kentucky River WMA and 25 slots for each quota hunt on Big Rivers WMA. Dove quota hunters on Kentucky River WMA must only use non-toxic shot. Mentor/youth dove hunts to include four fields. Kentucky Fish and Wildlife will also hold four mentor/youth dove quota hunts on Tuesday, Sept. 1, with one each at the Clarks River National Wildlife Refuge (NWR) in Marshall County, Mullins WMA in Kenton County, Barren River Lake WMA in Barren County, and a private land cooperator field in Lincoln County. Dove quota hunters on Clarks River NWR must only use non-toxic shot. The rules for the mentor/youth dove quota hunts are unchanged from last year and are available on the Migratory Bird Hunting webpage, along with the application link. The online application period for these hunts is also through Friday, Aug. 21. A state-approved Hunter Education certification is required for all Kentucky hunters age 12 or older who were born in 1975 or later. A one-year Hunter Education Exemption Permit is available free to hunters who can't obtain their certification before going afield, but the permittee must be accompanied in the field by an adult who is Hunter Education-certified. Before legally hunting migratory birds, hunters must complete the Harvest Information Program (HIP) survey. The process takes less than 5 minutes by visiting "My Profile" to fill out the survey. After completing the HIP survey, hunters will receive a confirmation number that must be written on their hunting license or Kentucky Migratory Bird/Waterfowl Permit.

Murray State earns academic honors from AVCA

MURRAY — The Murray State University volleyball program received the 2026 Team Academic Award and was named to the Team Academic Honor Roll by the American Volleyball Coaches Association in July.

The Racers were one of 1,432 teams across all divisions to receive the Team Academic Award and were featured on the Team Academic Honor Roll, representing the top 20% of GPAs nationally by division. Collegiate volleyball teams qualify for the AVCA Team Academic Award by maintaining a year-long grade-point average of at least 3.3 on a 4.0 scale. 2026 marks the ninth time that Murray State has received the Team Academic Award and the fourth consecutive season winning the award.

“I couldn’t be more proud of this group of ladies,” said acting head coach Tristyn Krzos. “The work they put in every day doesn’t stop when they leave the gym, and this recognition is a reflection of their drive and commitment to excellence in the classroom as much as on the court. We will continue to keep raising the standard!”

EKU coach not surprised by Malachi Moreno’s growth on, off the court

By KEITH TAYLOR
Kentucky Today

RICHMOND, Ky. (KT) — Eastern Kentucky University coach A.W. Hamilton has had the inside track on Malachi Moreno since he was old enough to pick up a basketball.

Hamilton coached Moreno’s brother Michael Moreno for four seasons at Eastern and was the first to offer Malachi a scholarship when he was indecisive about playing basketball. Hamilton has watched Malachi Moreno develop into the top player in the state during his prep career at Great Crossing and now at Kentucky.

“I remember when you know nobody thought he was going to play basketball,” Hamilton said. “To see where he is now, it’s pretty cool ... I’ve watched him grow up from a kid all the way up to where he is now, and just I’m proud of him. I’m really proud of him.”

Hamilton added that Michael Moreno’s influence has been a plus on and off the court. Michael Moreno enjoyed a stellar career at ECU from 2019-24, playing in 161 games. He scored 1,631 points, grabbed 958 rebounds and 59 blocks while playing for the Colonels. Moreno played at Scott County High School and was a Kentucky Mr. Basketball finalist in 2019. Malachi claimed the state’s top honor six years later in 2025.

“I’m proud of what Michael’s been able to help him and how Michael’s been able to help him grow,” Hamilton said. “You can see Malachi maturing ... I love what he does off the floor. He’s constantly in the community. He’s constantly signing autographs. He’s constantly doing things for young people. I couldn’t be more proud of Malachi.”

Kentucky’s Malachi Moreno’s continues to develop at a higher rate than anyone predicted.

Hamilton hasn’t been surprised by Moreno’s growth, especially this summer as he tested the waters and entered the NBA Draft before opting to return for a second season with the Wildcats.

“I’ve just watched some clips of him this summer and I can tell that he’s really invested into his body,” Hamilton said. “I think that’ll pay off for him this year. I think he’ll be able to play through contact better. I think his numbers will improve. I think his rebounding efficiency will improve. He’s put himself in position to have a huge, huge season.”

Hamilton added that going through the draft process will only help Malachi this season and beyond.

“I think it clears your mind and it gives you an idea what you need to do, what you need to improve on, and I think it also helps them understand how much they’ve got to invest in their bodies to get ready to play in the NBA,” he said. “It was a smart thing for him to do and it’ll pay off for him in the long run.”

Sudoku Puzzle

How it Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle! Good Luck!

‘Set all students up for success’: UK student serves as Agriculture Future of America ambassador

By Bailey Vandiver
bailey.vandiver@uky.edu

LEXINGTON, Ky.—
Pre-veterinary experience. Leadership opportunities through Agriculture Future of America (AFA). A formerly feral cat named Wema. Alana Henegar has gained these things and more as a University of Kentucky student.
From Delaplane, Virginia, Henegar is studying Animal Sciences in the UK Martin-Gatton College of Agriculture, Food and Environment and expects to graduate in 2027. She hopes to attend veterinary school and have a career in large animal veterinary care.
This year, she is serving as an ambassador for AFA, an organization that connects young leaders with professional development experiences. As a freshman, Henegar learned about AFA from UK’s student ambassador at the time and decided to join.

Unlike many clubs or chapters at college campuses, AFA doesn’t have regular meetings but is represented by ambassadors and invites students to national conferences. Gatherings such as the Precision Agriculture Institute and Food Systems

Institute offer skill development and networking opportunities.
Henegar attended the AFA Leaders Conference in November 2025, which included networking and skill-building.
“It strengthens your public speaking, networking, and leadership abilities as a whole,” Henegar said. “There are opportunities to get your foot in the door at companies for post-grad or internships.”

Henegar said she learned about potential jobs she had never considered, like being a veterinarian for the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

experience. She is a peer mentor in the Martin-Gatton CAFE Living Learning Program (LLP), is an officer for the Block and Bridle club and is a member of the Pre-Vet Club. She also worked at the necropsy lab at the Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory (VDL).

She has also shadowed and worked at vet clinics to complement her classroom learning and prepare for veterinary school. Henegar has brought more than just knowledge home. Last year, a clinic she worked at received a feral cat and her kittens. The kittens were adopted, but no one had claimed the mom, so Henegar adopted Wema.
Henegar said she can’t recommend AFA enough to her fellow UK students.
“I want to make sure that other people know enough about it to know that it will be fun, and that it’ll be a great experience for them,” she said.
Learn more about Animal Sciences and pre-veterinary medicine mentoring at UK. Learn more about Agriculture Future of America. Applications for the next AFA Leaders Conference are due Sept. 10, 2026.

“AFA not only helps you figure out other opportunities, but it helps you better yourself to be able to work toward those opportunities,” Henegar said.
This summer, Henegar attended the Animal Institute in Kansas City, where she heard from professionals and visited production factories for companies such as Hill’s Pet Food. She also visited the Kansas State Capitol to learn about advocacy and legislation that impacts the industry.
“This conference helps to show students the different ways they can be involved and help the industry that feeds the world,” Henegar said.
Organizations at UK have further enhanced Henegar’s educational

‘Mr. Farm Safety’ Dale Dobson Leaves Lasting Mark Across Kentucky

By Laurna Todd
KPI Writer

KPI Dale Dobson, widely known throughout Kentucky as “Mr. Farm Safety,” recently passed away unexpectedly, leaving behind a legacy built on service, compassion and a lifelong commitment to protecting farmers and their families.

Although Dobson was from Hodgenville, his influence extended across the commonwealth, including Western Kentucky, where he dedicated considerable time to helping farmers, farm families and first responders. His efforts brought lifesaving training, safety education and mental-health resources to rural communities throughout the region.

Dobson dedicated more than three decades to improving farm safety, emergency rescue, rural health and mental-health awareness. Former Kentucky Agriculture Commissioner Billy Ray Smith hired him to establish the Kentucky Department of Agriculture’s Farm Safety Program.

Dobson went on to serve under four agriculture commissioners before being appointed director of Farm Safety and Rural Health by Agriculture Commissioner Jonathan Shell.

One of Dobson’s many visits to Western Kentucky brought him to the Bandana Baptist Church Family Life Center in Ballard County, where community members and first responders gathered for the ribbon cutting and unveiling of a grain bin safety and rescue training trailer dedicated in memory of Benny Cooper.

Dobson and the Kentucky Department of Agriculture developed the trailer with support from donors whose contributions are recognized on the unit. Dobson was passionate about dedicating it to Cooper, a lifelong farmer who lost his life in a grain bin accident in January 2025.

The trailer-mounted unit was designed to provide first responders with safe, hands-on rescue training. It replicates a grain bin environment without requiring participants to train inside an actual bin. Elevated from the ground and built without moving parts, the unit provides a controlled setting where emergency personnel can learn and practice lifesaving rescue techniques.

The project demonstrated Dobson’s ability to turn tragedy into education, preparation and hope. It gave Western Kentucky first responders access to critical training that could make a lifesaving difference during future grain bin emergencies. The trailer represents just one of the many ways Dobson’s work made a lasting impact on individuals and communities throughout Kentucky.

Throughout his career, Dobson worked closely with farmers, farm families, first responders and rural communities. His leadership helped expand farm safety beyond accident prevention by connecting agricultural communities with emergency rescue training, preventive healthcare and mental-health resources.

Dobson became especially recognized for his “Power of a Handshake” initiative, which encouraged meaningful conversations about mental health and reminded farmers that they were appreciated and never alone. During his career, he personally distributed 3,369 challenge coins as symbols of hope, encouragement and support.

It has been documented by several sources that Dobson’s work contributed to 21 suicide interventions. An additional 32 individuals reported that the Raising Hope program significantly improved their mental or physical health or helped save their lives. Through education, outreach and trusted relationships, the program’s efforts also contributed to an estimated 75% reduction in Kentucky’s annual average number of farmer suicides, from approximately 50 per year to 12.

Under Dobson’s leadership, Raising Hope developed into a nationally recognized model combining farm safety, emergency rescue, preventive healthcare and mental-health outreach. His vision influenced programs beyond Kentucky and created a foundation that can continue serving agricultural communities for generations.

Although Dobson built programs that changed and saved lives, his greatest impact may be found in the people he met along the way. He was known for his humility, compassion and servant leadership, as well as his ability to make farmers and their families feel seen, valued and supported.

From his hometown of Hodgenville to the farming communities of Western Kentucky and beyond, Dobson’s legacy will remain in every handshake, every trained first responder and every life made safer through his work. His familiar reminders—“You Are Appreciated” and “Life is Good”—will continue carrying forward the hope and encouragement he shared throughout Kentucky and rural America.

unexpected role during World War II.

In 1945, German prisoners of war were brought to Paducah to assist with flood-control efforts along the Ohio River. The prisoners were housed in the two-story clubhouse while helping protect the city's floodwall openings during periods of high water.

Another Attempt at Revival

Following the war, local leaders again attempted to revive the golf course. The club reopened again but the effort proved short-lived and the club once again closed its doors.

Southwood Brings New Life

In 1953, volunteers launched what would become the property's most successful restoration up to that time. After less than three months of concentrated work by dedicated members clearing brush, restoring greens, and renovating the clubhouse, the course reopened on July 3, 1953, as Southwood Country Club. Southwood officially chartered with 250 members and signed a 25-year lease on the property on April 8, 1953. Despite the tremendous progress, financial difficulties once again surfaced. By the fall of 1955, Southwood was evicted from the property, bringing another chapter to an abrupt end.

The Birth of Rolling Hills

Rather than allowing the course to disappear once more, a fourth golf organization stepped forward. That organization became Rolling Hills Country Club. Under the leadership of Paul Friedlander, one of the club's founding organizers and its first president, Rolling Hills established the financial stability previous organizations had struggled to achieve.

Southwood had restored the clubhouse and front nine holes, but the back nine had remained abandoned since the original Lakeview days. Rolling Hills members undertook another massive volunteer effort, removing trees, rebuilding fairways, landscaping the grounds, and restoring the neglected holes.

Their work paid off when the back nine officially reopened on Memorial Day, of 1953 restoring the property to a full 18-hole championship course.

The Rolling Hills Invitational

With all 18 holes back in play, club members turned their attention toward establishing a premier golf tournament. Their vision became reality during the summer of 1957 with the inaugural Rolling Hills Invitational Golf Tournament.

Melvin Dace captured the championship, becoming the tournament's first winner and beginning what would become one of the area's most respected golfing traditions.

A Clubhouse Built for Hospitality

Long before its many transformations, the original Lakeview clubhouse had earned a reputation as one of Western Kentucky's finest social destinations.

Its kitchen was considered among the best in the region, preparing exceptional meals and rare delicacies for members and their guests. The club employed Allen Johnson, formerly a chef at Chicago's renowned Palmer House Hotel, who was regarded as one of Kentucky's finest culinary professionals.

Breakfast was served for members arriving early for morning golf or swims in the club's pool. Lunch was served at noon, while dinner was offered beginning at 6 p.m. Members could dine in the private ground-floor dining room or enjoy more casual meals in the downstairs grill before changing from golf, or swimming attire.

Nearby stood a separate building, constructed to match the design and finish of the main clubhouse, dedicated exclusively to caddies. The facility provided showers and locker service, reflecting the club's commitment to first-class amenities for everyone who worked on the grounds.

At the time, it was often said that no kitchen in Western Kentucky could surpass the one at Lakeview

Country Club.

A Legacy of Perseverance

From its beginnings as Lakeview Golf Club in 1927 to its rebirth as Rolling Hills Country Club, the property has survived economic depression, abandonment, wartime service, multiple ownership changes, and repeated closures.

What ultimately distinguished Rolling Hills Country Club was the determination of its members. Through countless hours of volunteer labor, financial commitment, and community leadership, they transformed an overgrown ghost of a golf course into a thriving country club whose legacy continues to endure.

Kentucky State Police Investigating Death of McCracken County Jail Inmate

Staff Report

PADUCAH, Ky. — Kentucky State Police Post 1 detectives are investigating the death of a McCracken County Jail inmate following an apparent medical emergency earlier this week.

According to KSP, detectives were contacted by the McCracken County Jail on Sunday, Aug. 2, after an inmate suffered what was described as an apparent medical episode while in the presence of jail medical staff. The inmate was transported to a local hospital, where he was later pronounced dead.

The deceased was identified as Brandon Bowman, 35, of Paducah.

Kentucky State Police said the McCracken County Jail requested the agency conduct an independent investigation into the death, which is standard procedure in many in-custody deaths.

The preliminary investigation determined Bowman was receiving medical attention when he experienced the sudden medical emergency. Authorities said there were no immediate signs of foul play.

An autopsy was per-

Brandon Bowman, 35, of Paducah formed Monday, Aug. 3. According to investigators, the examination revealed medical complications that are believed to have contributed to Bowman’s death. The autopsy found no evidence of foul play.

KSP officials emphasized that, based on the evidence gathered so far, investigators do not suspect criminal activity in connection with the incident.

Detective Propes of Kentucky State Police Post 1 is leading the ongoing investigation. As with all death investigations, detectives will continue reviewing medical records, witness statements and other evidence before the case is officially closed.

No additional information regarding the specific medical complications identified during the autopsy has been released.

Kentucky State Police encourages anyone with information related to the investigation to contact Post 1 as detectives continue their review.

The investigation remains active, and authorities said additional details will be released if they become available. Until the investigation is complete, officials have not announced a final cause or manner of death beyond the preliminary findings indicating the death resulted from medical complications rather than foul play.

From Living Rooms to Facebook Lives: How Direct Sales Have Changed

By Laurna Todd
KPI Writer

You may remember your mother or grandmother hosting a Tupperware party in the living room. Neighbors gathered for coffee and dessert while a representative demonstrated the “magic” of an airtight seal. Perhaps some of those pastel bowls are still tucked inside your kitchen cabinets—and may now have vintage value.

Tupperware parties became a cultural phenomenon during the mid-20th century by combining shopping, socializing and entrepreneurship. Inventor Earl Tupper introduced his lightweight plastic containers in the 1940s, but shoppers initially struggled to understand the special “burping” seal.

Saleswoman Brownie Wise recognized that customers needed to see the containers in action. During in-home demonstrations, guests could handle the products, ask questions and learn how the lids worked. The parties became about more than kitchenware, providing women with opportunities to earn money, meet people and build lasting friendships.

My mother, Larrah Workman, remembers her mother, Teresa LeNeave, and her aunt, Mary Dennis, hosting Home Interiors parties when she was young. Many companies embraced the home-party model during that era, with Mary Kay, PartyLite, Arbonne and Rainbow vacuum demonstrations also becoming popular.

LeNeave and Dennis traveled throughout the area selling Home Interiors products. The business allowed them to earn extra income while meeting new people and enjoying an active social life.

Years later, Workman became involved in direct sales through Rodan + Fields. She continues to offer Young Living essential oils through her Mayfield shop, Bin Livin', but she no longer travels from home to home. Today, she reaches customers through Facebook, her brick-and-mortar shop and her website, bin-livin.odoo.com. Convenience has become a priority, allowing customers to browse and purchase products with ease.

Like Workman, many people involved in direct sales have found new ways to reach customers. Sales that once took place in living rooms or on doorsteps have shifted to Facebook Live events, websites, boutiques, social media and farmers markets. Changing lifestyles and growing safety concerns have made unexpected door-to-door visits far less common, as many people today would hesitate to open their homes to unfamiliar salespeople.

Although the methods have changed, successful selling still depends on the person behind the product. Customers respond to someone who believes in what they sell and enthusiastically shares it.

Progress offers convenience, but old-fashioned home parties remind us of something worth preserving. Getting “back to basics” does not require abandoning technology. It means making time to gather, talk and form the personal connections that made those parties so memorable.

Gospel in Action event in Mayfield big success

By CHIP HUTCHESON
Kentucky Today

MAYFIELD, Ky. (KT) — Numerous churches in the Graves County Baptist Association joined forces last Saturday to providing an array of free resources as well as engage people with the gospel.

“To God be the glory for all that He did at the ‘Gospel in Action’ event hosted by Bro. Marcus Burnett and the fine folks at High Point Baptist Church,” said Mike Jones, associational mission strategist. This is the second year for the annual event.

“It was fantastic,” said Burnett in expressing his appreciation for the opportunity provided by Jones and the local association. “The idea he brought forward, to me as a pastor, it was so beautiful to see all the churches come together, with one unified mission, offering simple things. One group changed oil, some ladies were painting fingernails, one church gave away food boxes and clothing, another church gave away hot dogs and chips. We got to serve so many people — it was an honor for our church to host and have an opportunity for folks to come out and be served.”

Jones said the crowd numbered around 200, with “at least 90 families being ministered to and at least 85 people helping with the event. There were so many others who dropped by but did not sign in.” Numerous giveaways were featured during the day.

“We (association) were not out a lot of expense — our main expense was oil changes. We did 17 oil changes, mostly for single moms, so other than some promotional expense, the oil filters and oil were the bulk of our expenses.” He added that most every church involved not only brought people but also resources. churches included High Point, Enon Baptist, New Concord Baptist, Hickory Baptist, Mayfield First Baptist, Sharon Baptist, Rhodes Chapel Baptist, Trace Creek Baptist and Chief Cornerstone Baptist.

Also involved were Jaime Masso, pastor of Primera Iglesias Mayfield, who served as translator; Drs. Andrew and Tim Cude of Twin Teeth Dentistry in Paducah (Andrew is a member of Trace Creek while Tim is a member of Rosebower Baptist in Paducah); Shanna Burgess and Murray State University nursing students; Gideons, who gave away 65 English and 25 Spanish Bibles; Rick and Shirleen Pilcher with Child Evangelism Fellowship, who did five-day Bible clubs at several churches and a one-day event at New Concord.

tion. About 20-plus people were on the team — six adults and the rest teenagers.

Also involved were Baptist Bikers, a ministry of the association and New Concord, where Gary Cruse is pastor. That organization spent Saturday “ministering, witnessing and sharing — making people aware of the ministry they have,” Jones said.

Another service offered was free blood pressure checks.

The association is now working with churches to debrief and begin planning for next year. That work includes following up with about 15 people or families that signed registration cards.

Burnett, who will observe his second anniversary as High Point’s pastor in December, said the follow-up process is important because “many people said they were not involved in a church at all, but indicated they would like to be involved somewhere. It is sweet to be involved in the follow-up team.”

Burnett noted that “for our church this was a big event — having this many people on our grounds at one time. It was encouraging; it was truly phenomenal. It was the biggest event we have had since we have been here. It was good for us to see what the Lord will do when we come together.”

Mercy and Forgiveness

Eight defining moments reveal secrets to David’s heart

By Teresa LeNeave
leneave2@comcast.net

The biblical life of King David is often remembered for military victories, political leadership, and personal failures. Very often his personal failures are what preachers choose to teach from the pulpit. Yet a closer examination of Scripture reveals another defining characteristic—his remarkable capacity for forgiveness and mercy, even toward those who sought his life.

David’s relationship with King Saul illustrates this theme. Although Saul repeatedly pursued David with the intent to kill him, David consistently refused to retaliate. On two occasions, he had the opportunity to take Saul’s life but instead chose restraint, declaring that he would not harm “the Lord’s anointed” (1 Samuel 24). Even cutting a corner from Saul’s robe troubled David’s conscience, demonstrating his deep respect for God’s authority.

David’s mercy continued after Saul’s death. Rather than celebrating the fall of his greatest enemy, he mourned both Saul and Jonathan, composing the famous “Song of the Bow” (2 Samuel 1). Significantly, David’s lament praised Saul’s strengths and never mentioned his failures, offering a striking example of honoring an opponent instead of dwelling on past wrongs.

The same response appeared when Saul’s son, Ish-bosheth, was murdered. Expecting praise, the assassins presented David with the victim’s severed head. Instead, David condemned their actions and ordered their execution, refusing to endorse revenge disguised as justice.

David’s compassion extended even to his own rebellious son, Absalom. After Absalom’s death, David openly grieved, crying, “O my son Absalom, my son, my son!” His sorrow overshadowed any sense of political victory, revealing a father’s heart rather than a conqueror’s.

His loyalty also endured beyond Jonathan’s death. Honoring a covenant made years earlier, David sought out Jonathan’s disabled son, Mephibosheth, restoring Saul’s estate to him and welcoming him to the king’s table. Later, when conflicting reports arose concerning Mephibosheth’s loyalty during Absalom’s rebellion, David chose a measured response instead of acting out of anger.

David’s final recorded example of selflessness came after his sinful census brought judgment upon Israel. As the nation suffered, David accepted full responsibility and pleaded with God to spare the people, describing them as “these sheep” and offering himself in their place.

Although David’s life included serious moral failures which include adultery, deceit, and the arranged death of Uriah, scripture consistently portrays him as a man whose heart sought after God. As a result, even God called David “a man after His own heart”. The secret: A heart of mercy and forgiveness which is the same kind of heart God has.

OUR GUIDE FOREVER

Bro. Brandon G. Bramlett
Bandana Baptist Church

We never saw him again. Even when we did, we barely caught a glimpse of him. But before we parted ways, he smiled and said, “And that concludes our tour of Marvel Cave, ladies and gentlemen.” Our tour guide was off to lead another party of curious cavers after escorting us through the winding passages, spears of stalactite, and dripping cavernous chambers within this historic cave which lies 500 feet beneath Silver Dollar City. His only job was to direct us through a cave—not back to our cars, hotels, or other attractions in Branson, Missouri. While our guide knew everything about caves, he wasn’t an expert in everything—he could only take us as far as his knowledge would take him.

There is, however, a Guide whose knowledge is limitless—and therefore, whose guidance is limitless. “For this God is our God for ever and ever,” wrote the psalmist, “he will be our guide even unto death” (Psalm 48:14, KJV). The Lord leads His people through every season of life and His guidance does not end until He brings them to their heavenly home. The great Shepherd steers His saints through life and toward life everlasting: “Nevertheless, I am continually with you; you hold my right hand. You guide me with your counsel, and afterward you will receive me to glory” (Ps. 73:23-24).

He can straighten the most winding paths with His wisdom, brighten the darkest valleys by His illuminating light, and carry His people through the most tempestuous of life’s storms. No matter how heavy the burden, how confusing the decision, or how uncertain tomorrow may be, the God who knows the end from the beginning promises, “the LORD will guide you continually” (Isa. 58:11a). Even if you rode to the edge of the galaxy on the rays of the sun or descended to the floor of the ocean, the Lord would be there to lead the way: “If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there your hand shall lead me, and your right hand shall hold me” (Ps. 139:9-10). And while every tour guide eventually says goodbye, the Lord says, “I will never leave you nor forsake you” (Heb. 13:5). Moreover, He doesn’t merely tell believers where to go

—He goes with them: “It is the LORD who goes before you. He will be with you” (Deut. 31:8a).

It is no wonder why generations of believers have prayed and found comfort in singing the words of “He Leadeth Me” by J. H. Gilmore (1834—1918), which says, “He leadeth me: O blessed thought! O words with heavenly comfort fraught! Whate’er I do, where’er I be, still ‘tis God’s hand that leadeth me. Sometimes mid scenes of deepest gloom, sometimes where Eden’s flowers bloom, by waters calm, o’er troubled sea, still ‘tis God’s hand that leadeth me.”

The Beauty of God’s love and forgiveness

By William F Holland Jr.
billyhollandministries.com

I remember when I was around 10 years old, there was a girl at school who was a couple of years older than me who was constantly being teased and treated harshly. I can see her clearly, as if it were yesterday, even though it was over 50 years ago. She was a stocky girl with tangled jet-black hair, and her clothes were often wrinkled, but what really caused the negative attention was her constant runny nose. There are many reasons why children are mean, but as a shy child, I’m ashamed to admit that I was a part of the crowd of spectators that quietly witnessed the daily harassment of this poor young lady. How I wish I dared to stop them, but I was just a scared, skinny kid who was thankful that they were not picking on me. After months of mean and rude comments, the rest of the students eventually learned who she was and made sure to stay far away from her. Not only was everyone afraid of catching her “cooties,” whatever that meant, they also definitely did not want to be associated with her and risk being included as another target. I rode the same bus as she did, and one afternoon, I observed an act of cruelty that was even more disturbing than the daily ritual of causing trouble. I will never forget that day, as it was one of those muggy fall afternoons, and the bus was packed. I just wanted to get home. There were a few older boys that we used to call red-necks who rode the bus, and they began their daily routine of taking turns hitting this girl on the head with heavy textbooks. We could tell it hurt by the sound it made. Of course, she started crying and telling them to stop, but this just made things worse. I felt very sorry for her, and even to this day, I become emotional when I recall this event. I think back and see myself as no better than a spectator at a Roman coliseum when Christians would be thrown to the lions. It’s no excuse that I was young, weak, and afraid. Anyway, everyone was cheering and mocking when suddenly, one of the boys grabbed her book bag and her purse out of her hands and started tossing everything out the window. I looked back and could see her books, notebooks, personal items, and papers blowing across the lawns as the bus barreled down the road. I was in shock as I realized the importance of these things and, in my sadness, I wondered how anyone could be so vicious. This was beyond cruel, and just as sick is that I can still hear the crowd cheering and going into a frenzy with laughter. It seemed many thought this public display of brutality was entertaining and that it was somehow enjoyable to watch an innocent kid scream and cry. The bus driver was hollering for everyone to keep the noise down, but I’m not sure if he knew what was going on. The atmosphere was truly a madhouse, and as far as I know, nothing was ever done about it. I will never forget the look of horror on her face. When I was around 12, I was in a gym class with around 20 other boys, but somehow one boy had everyone in the class terrified of him. Why didn’t we stand up to him? Statistics show that one in every three kids are bullied, and most of these situations are commonly kept secret. Sadly, some individuals have taken their own lives because life just seemed hopeless. Dan Pearce is quoted as saying, “People who love themselves don’t hurt other people. The more we hate ourselves, the more we want others to suffer.” Bullies are actually agonizing within their own conscience, and search for those they can punish to keep from dealing with empathy. However, as deep and hurtful as these attacks may be, we can turn to God and ask Him to heal our hearts and help us forgive our enemies as we overcome the feelings of rejection and resentment. Our dignity may be assaulted, vandalized, and cruelly mocked, but it can never be taken away unless it is surrendered. Let go of the animosity and allow God to help you find closure and rise above the trials as you press forward in the beauty of his love and the holiness of his forgiveness. If we cannot find peace within ourselves, we will not find it anywhere.

JUST THINGS

By Gary Miller
Outdoortruths.org

At least once a year I fish the Powell River with my friend, Michael. We live about an hour from each other, so these trips are planned a few weeks in advance. Our preferred way of fishing is with light tackle in kayaks. We both love everything the river offers. The Powell is a small river, and while there are some larger small-mouth bass, most of our trophies measure less than 15 inches. But the fight they put up, combined with the pull of the current, gives us plenty of thrills and hours of enjoyment. I am new to the river compared to Michael. My river fishing started only about 15 years ago. Michael’s began when he was a child with his dad and brother. Every time we go, I hear stories and lessons from those days on the river. Ed (his dad) was a local postal worker who spent his spare time floating from one stretch of river to the other. He knew every place to put in and take out. Of course he had his favorite bait. And back then, it wasn’t kayaks, but Jon boats. A mess of redeyes was as good as any meal you could buy at the local grocery store. While I knew Michael and his whole family as a teenager, I never knew the priorities of his dad. What I’ve learned from our fishing trips is that Ed had a great sense of what was truly valuable. And what he valued most was what money couldn’t buy. I learned this after hearing story after story about how the river would sometimes swallow rods, reels, and anchors. Not to mention glasses, knives, and other tackle. While Ed and the boys had to learn to “deep-sea-dive” to try to retrieve these things when lost, Ed would eventually remind them that they were just that. Things. Replaceable things. There is nothing – no thing- that can trump the value of time on the river, especially the ones with your sons. Rods will be broken. Reels will be lost. The river will claim whatever isn’t tied down. But the value of those memories will never diminish. In fact, with each passing year, they will become more valuable. How do I know? I hear it in every story Michael tells. I hope the things you value can’t be bought, bent, or broken. I hope they’re found in experiences, adventures, and people – maybe even in the moments that involve losing or breaking those things that were, after all, only things.

A Fancy Farm Picnic to Remember:

FANCY FARM, Ky. - During the 146th Annual Fancy Farm Picnic on Saturday, Aug. 1, many sitting and aspiring Kentucky politicians gathered to deliver speeches. Whether they were supporting their party’s candidates or campaigning for office from Bishop William Francis Medley of the Diocese of Owensboro. Dave “Buzz” Baker, a sportscaster and WKYT-TV account executive, then served as master of ceremonies for the political speeches.

The main opponents at the event were Charles Booker, the Democratic nominee for the U.S.

displayed a humorous graphic showing Beshear’s face superimposed over the state of Arizona.

Speakers included U.S. Sen. Rand Paul, State Sen. Jason Howell, state Rep. Kim Holloway, Democratic nominee for Kentucky’s 1st Congressional District John “Drew” Williams, Lt. Gov. Jacqueline Coleman and many others.

themselves, there was plenty of excitement to be found in this chaotic, yet truly fun and uniquely American tradition.

The Fancy Farm Picnic is held each year in Fancy Farm at St. Jerome Catholic Church and attracts visitors from across the country. Vendors serve a wide variety of food, including barbecue nachos, pulled pork sandwiches and, most famously, mutton.

Fancy Farm is located in Graves County and has a population of 403. The community’s median age is 56.5 years, according to the 2020 U.S. Census.

At 2 p.m., the political speeches began with an introduction by Steven Elder, vice president of U.S. Bank and a Murray State University alumnus, followed by an invocation

Senate, and Rep. Andy Barr, the Republican nominee. Their matchup follows Sen. Mitch McConnell’s primary loss in May, ending his tenure as the longest-serving Senate party leader in U.S. history. Before the event, organizers announced that McConnell would not attend after suffering a fall. He is currently recovering.

Throughout the event, Democrats repeatedly chanted, “Where’s Mitch?” while Republicans responded with, “Where’s Beshear?” The chants grew louder with each exchange.

Gov. Andy Beshear, a Democrat, did not attend the event and was criticized by Republicans for his absence. Beshear was reportedly in Las Vegas at the time. During his opening remarks, Baker

Baker also acknowledged that Coleman is currently undergoing treatment for breast cancer, noting that she is winning her battle against the disease.

Secretary of State Michael Adams concluded the political speeches with what initially seemed like a routine introduction but later hinted at a larger political announcement. He began by expressing his support for Barr and reflected on his efforts to hold both Democrats and Republicans accountable during his time in office.

He then shifted to the 2027 gubernatorial race, saying, “I’ve dedicated

Andy Barr(R) speaking to his supporters on how he plans to bring economic development to KY through continued infrastructural development efforts, including but not limited to his support of a privately funded AI Data Center in Paducah, KY. (Photo by Ciro Astarita) my career to our beloved Republican Party, and the best thing I can do—for my team—is to call on all Republicans to join me in supporting James Comer to be our next governor. James Comer is not only our strongest candidate for governor, he’s the best prepared to do the job. In 2027, let’s get with James Comer, and he will lead us to victory.”

Following the endorsement, Republicans held up signs reading, “Run Comer Run.” A reported biplane also flew over the event with a banner displaying the same message.

As Adams left the stage, Baker remarked, “In the TV business, that’s what we call a tease, but at least he kept everybody around till the end of the show.”
