Marion Public Library event to showcase local and regional authors

Meeting the author is one way to add enjoyment to your reading experience. The Marion Public Library (MPL) is making it easy to meet an author to chat this weekend. More than twenty authors will be on hand Saturday, October 24, for the second annual Local Author Fair.

For this second year, the organizers have really ramped up their efforts, according to Aurora Hyde, Reference and Indiana History Assistant and co-organizer for the event. The library used book sale will be Friday and Saturday as well.

“We’re calling it Books & Brews and we’re going to have free coffee and tea and some other refreshments. We’re selling books and allowing authors to sell other items. One author is selling Author Cathy Shouse (L) and Stephanie Nicol, publisher and editor of “TravelIN” magazine, caught up at Newfields at a media showplace event. Shouse will be one of many authors at the Marion Public Library’s author event this Saturday.

stuffed animals.” Mitchell Hadley, an author from Huntington, will be signing Saturday. Years ago, he wrote fiction books. But more recently, he’s writing novels and has participated in book signings in Swayzee and Fort Wayne. “I’ve always been fascinated by stories, particularly the ways people respond to circumstances, the decisions they make, and the consequences of those decisions. Writing novels gave me the opportunity to explore those questions in ways that other forms of writing couldn’t.” Hadley’s books sometimes have characters who have been through trauma, among many other aspects of his books. He shows how life events impact characters’ behavior. “I’m particularly interested in the complexity of human behavior,” he said. “People aren’t always consistent, their motivations aren’t always clear, and they don’t necessarily make the decisions we expect them to make. I like fiction that challenges readers to think about those things rather than simply telling them what to think.”

Hadley is ready to chat on a number of subjects with visitors Saturday, including favorite authors. Readers of Hadley’s books may be challenged by his stories, and that’s his intention.

“I think one of the most important things to understand about my writing is that I’m not particularly interested in giving readers easy answers,” he said. “I’m interested in characters who are recognizably human, with all the contradictions, strengths, weaknesses, and uncertainties that entails.”

Hadley’s thoughts on book events match what the MPL organizers of Books & Brews are aiming for: making connections with authors, readers, and books.

I love appearing at book fairs. . . .The Community Foundation receives $1.5 million GIFT IX Grant to multiply local giving Marion, Indiana — The Community Foundation of Grant County has received a matching fund grant totaling $1,500,000 as part of the ninth phase of Lilly Endowment Inc.’s initiative, Giving Indiana Funds for Tomorrow (GIFT IX).

Community Foundation of Grant County will use $900,000 of the funding to grow its unrestricted endowment and $600,000 to support Project Leadership’s long-term organizational sustainability and capacity-building efforts.

Qualifying gifts to the Community Foundation’s unrestricted endowment will be eligible for a $2-to-$1 match from Lilly Endowment, meaning every $1 donated will become $3 invested in Grant County’s future. Unrestricted endowment funds provide flexible grantmaking resources to respond to the community’s changing needs and opportunities.

Qualifying gifts supporting Project Leadership’s long-term sustainability efforts will receive a $1-to-$1 match, doubling each eligible gift. The Project Leadership match will help strengthen the organization’s long-term financial stability, leadership continuity, and capacity to continue providing college and career readiness services to Grant County students.

Through GIFT IX,

Lilly Endowment has awarded matching grants totaling $124.5 million to community foundations across Indiana. Eligible community foundations submitted proposals requesting grants ranging from $250,000 to $13.2 million based on the population of the counties they serve.

“GIFT IX is an incredible opportunity for Grant County,” said Dawn Brown, President/CEO of the Community Foundation of Grant County. “It gives local donors the chance to multiply their generosity while building resources that will strengthen our community for years to come.”

Lilly Endowment created the GIFT initiative in 1990 to help local communities in Indiana develop the philanthropic capacity to identify local needs and challenges and work with other organizations and residents to help their communities thrive. Through GIFT IX, Lilly Endowment has awarded $259.7 million to support community foundations in each of Indiana’s 92 counties. These grants are helping community foundations grow their financial resources and further strengthen their ability to address their community’s highest-priority challenges and opportunities.

Author Mitchell Hadley is shown at a recent author program at the Swayzee Public Library. Hadley will also be at the Marion Public Library Books & Brews author showcase Saturday, October 24 from 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

MHS, Taylor U wind ensembles to combine for special concert

The Marion High School wind ensemble is excited to be joining the Taylor University wind ensemble for a special combined concert later this month.

The public is invited to come out and enjoy this special performance, which will start at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 28 at the Rediger Chapel Auditorium at the Boren Campus Center. Admission is free.

Taylor’s Dr. Christopher Bade and Marion High School’s Joshua Huff will be conducting their ensembles. Each ensemble will present several pieces, and the two groups will combine for one special piece.

“It is an honor for Taylor University to host the Marion

High School band,” Dr. Bade said. “This collaborative performance is an opportunity to celebrate the outstanding work of each individual ensemble.”

This combined concert offers the chance for students and educators at both schools to make connections and build community. It is also a great opportunity for MHS students to experience music performance at the next level, giving them a chance to learn and grow as musicians.

“Our students are excited about this awesome opportunity,” said Huff, who is Marion High School’s Director of Bands. “We are grateful to Taylor University and Dr.

Bade for making this opportunity possible!”

Marion Community Schools is thankful for our educators who go the extra mile to provide such great opportunities for our students, and we are thankful for community collaboration with our Grant County neighbors, such as this great partnership with Taylor University!

Living...in a troubled world

The last hug

By Teresa LeNeave
leneave2@comcast.net

This quote reminded me of something I experienced a few years ago: “When we realize that a day is not simply another day added to our lives, but one less day we have to live, we began to appreciate our time more, and focus on the people, moments, and little things that truly matter” (Countryside Therapy, Facebook).

A few years ago, I went to an in-home estate sale where I bought a coat that looked brand new. I was quite proud to find the trash someone else no longer wanted, or needed, had become my treasure.

As you know, yard sales happen in the summer so I did not wear, or even try on the coat, until winter time.

Months later when I tried the coat on, I got quite the surprise and a memory that I will never forget. Tucked in one of the pockets was $78 folded neatly. However, the other pocket is what I’ve thought of several times over the years.

In the second pocket was a neatly folded to-do list which read, “Go to Kroger. Go to post office. Organize desk. Write.

Pay bills.” The first three items on the list were marked through with a black line. The last two were not. I wonder why they were never marked as “done”.

I’ve often thought, “Did she ever write what she wanted to write? What was she writing about? Was it a book? Was the book ever finished? Was it a poem or maybe a newspaper article? Did she have time to pay her bills before her life was taken?

I can’t help but think, one day we will all leave an unfinished to-do-list.

The Bible says life is but a vapor. James 4:14 says: “Yet you do not know what tomorrow will bring. What is your life? For you are a mist that appears for a little time and then vanishes.”

Many times, the Bible describes the fleeting nature of life on earth as short. Like a breath. A vapor. Barely seen. Not so we’ll be sad or worried but so we’ll think about eternity and where we will spend it.

Jesus said He came to give us eternal life (John 10:28). It’s a gift from God when we believe in His Son, Jesus Christ. Accept that gift while you can. Life is short. It’s unpredictable. One diagnosis can change everything.

Give the hug. Laugh when you can. Make that call. We never know when it will be the last hug. The last laugh. The last call. The last note that will be left in our coat pocket.

The narrow path is the way of love and life

The narrow path is the way of love and life

It seems the two topics that cause the most anger and division are politics and religion. I remember years ago speaking with an elderly man who was fondly known around town as friendly, successful, and wise, and he told me these were the two areas that he refused to discuss. He said that no matter which side a person openly stands for, you have just caused half the people to be against you. In this light, even though there is not a shortage of people who declare what they believe, we can see why others would rather keep their opinions to themselves.

There’s an old saying, “if we don’t stand for something, we’ll fall for anything.” In our modern world where many are ready to fight for their ideas, maybe it would be a good thing to consider what this means. The cleverness of this wordplay has serious implications, especially for truth seekers, as it reveals the importance of decision-making that’s guided by a set of values. Everyone has free will to embrace and defend whatever they trust, but there is a difference between information and truth. Just because we have knowledge about something and are convinced it’s accurate does not mean it is.

It’s normal and healthy to have convictions, but our carnality is not always tolerant of other people’s personal views. So as Christians, are we supposed to swing our sword and fight against those who do not believe like we do, or are we called to wage war against principalities and powers on our knees? We realize that within the aggressive and hostile world of religion and politics, everyone cannot be right, but let’s take this a step further. Matthew chapter 5 explains how our lives are to be centered in love. As Christians, the way we live (our speech, attitudes, and actions) identifies us, whether we want to admit it or not. We’ve not been called to argue and fight in our flesh; we’ve been commissioned to demonstrate the nature and character of Christ.

Take a look around and listen. Hatred is embedded within the world of politics and religion, and many Christians are infected. Some will say hatred is too harsh, because they would never openly say they hate anyone. But the secret of denial is that we learn how to deceive ourselves. The masses criticize those who run for office all the way up to the office of the president. As their faces turn red and their blood pressure rises, if this is not hate, what is it? Is it more socially acceptable to use words like loathing, resentment, abhorrence, contempt, disgust, enmity, and bitterness instead? So, how can the religious masses believe they are walking the narrow path of holiness, repentance, and obedience unto God, and yet be filled with these dark, angry attitudes? Some will say we love the person but hate their sin, but is this just another stealthy way to hide our animosity?

The religious environment is just another type of politics. We have leaders who voice their opinions, and there are plenty of followers who support their ideas. We have different churches on the corners of highways, and they will not even speak to each other. Like politics, we have families who are divided over the Biblical interpretations they have decided to accept. Beyond the opinions of how dogmatic or humble we are to be, Matthew chapter 7 lays it on the line when it comes to identifying and examining the deepest parts of our conscience. In verses 13 and 14 Jesus talks about the broad way and the narrow way. Who is He talking about?

Obviously He is referring to the lost and the saved, but notice carefully: in the Sermon on the Mount, Jesus is speaking to His followers about how to live the Christian life. We realize the unsaved are on the highway to eternal judgment, but we rarely hear about how the lukewarm religious people might also be on the same highway. God will spew lukewarm

people out of His mouth; so, are they lost? And what is the difference between a religious person in name only, and a follower who personally knows and obeys God? Spiritual love. I Corinthians is much more than a wedding blessing; it’s the most critical and literal demand in the Bible. If we do not surrender our will and be filled with His love for everyone despite their politics and religion, we are and have nothing. Join me next week as we continue this conversation.

Outdoor Truths: Common Pain

OUTDOOR TRUTHS

My favorite time of the year starts right now! It begins on Halloween and goes for about 6 weeks. In deer hunting terms these few weeks involve the pre-rut, rut, post-rut, and secondary rut. Each of these periods offers some exciting times to be in the woods. And if one is limited in the amount of days he or she can hunt, concentrating on this window of opportunity will provide the best chances to bring home a trophy. In years past I couldn’t wait for opening day. I was not only looking for meat to put in the freezer, I also thought that one big buck might just show up anytime. Therefore my “window of opportunity” started the end of September and ran through January. This was not only a long period of time but it was also very draining on me physically and on every other area of my life. I was obsessed and every day I couldn’t go hunting, I knew would be the day Mr. Bruiser Buck would walk by. I’m glad I got older and wiser, and slightly more mature. Today, I still love to hunt but I understand that not only do I have more important life responsibilities; I can save my time and energy for a much smaller period of time and still have fun and be successful. It’s the quality over quantity thing. It’s also just being a better manager of life.

The benefit I have that some do not is that hunting and fishing are important for what I do as a writer and speaker. I know that sounds very convenient, and my wife is not very impressed by that excuse either, but nevertheless these experiences give me fuel to write and help me identify with those that I speak to. It allows me not so much to tell my story but understand theirs – and yours.

This is also the story of Christianity and Jesus in particular. It is the story of commonality. It is the story of shared experience. It the story of one window of opportunity that Jesus took – willingly, that gave Him understanding of our story. You see, we live in world that is full of suffering and the most difficult question to answer for those who undergo such tremendous suffering is “why.” Why God, do you allow such pain? Why God, is there so much evil? Why God, are there so many people who are without? God has not chosen to give us very satisfying answers at times, but what He did choose to do was identify with our suffering. And in one small window of time, Jesus (God in the flesh) died; not only so He could tell us of His story of salvation for all, but so that He could understand our story of pain as well. Whatever we may say about Jesus, there is one thing we cannot say... we cannot say He knows nothing of our suffering. And for that He stands alone among all other religions.

Sudoku Puzzle

How it Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle! Good Luck!
