Fulton County Sheriff's Office Supports Summer Meal Program

The Fulton County Sheriff's Office recently partnered with the Fulton County School System to help distribute meals to families participating in the district's summer feeding program.

The sheriff and deputies assisted with meal distribution stops in Hickman, Cayce and Fulton, helping ensure families throughout the county received needed support while school was out of session.

For the sheriff's office, the effort reflected its commitment to serving residents beyond responding to emergency calls and carrying out traditional law-enforcement duties.

"To protect and serve is more than just a motto at the Fulton County Sheriff's Office—it's our commitment to every citizen of Fulton County," the department stated.

The sheriff's office also thanked the Fulton County School System for organizing the summer feeding program and continuing its efforts to meet the needs of local children and families.

Whether responding to a 911 call or assisting with a community program, the department said its deputies remain ready to answer whenever Fulton County needs them.

The partnership between the school system and sheriff's office demonstrates how local agencies can work together to build a stronger, safer and more compassionate community.

Fish and Wildlife offering classes to help hunters prepare for season

(KT) – To help prepare new hunters for a safe and successful experience in the field this fall, the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources is hosting a special statewide Hunter Education Day on Saturday.

The department will offer more than 30 in-person hunter education classes and live-fire range days at locations across Kentucky.

This annual educational opportunity is held in conjunction with National Shooting Sports Month, when additional attention is brought to shooting sports to grow the pastime in communities across the nation.

"With Kentucky's hunting seasons starting in mid-August, our Hunter Education Day is a special opportunity to help new hunters complete their required hunter education in time for the many fall hunting seasons," said Megan Bagby, hunter education supervisor for Kentucky Fish and Wildlife. "No matter their age, this is a convenient and free way to learn about firearms basics, whether they plan to hunt or to simply participate in shooting sports."

The department's Hunter Education training class covers hunter ethics, wildlife conservation and identification, field care of game, first aid, firearm safety, archery and muzzleloading. In the in-person course, the last session includes a written test and a live-fire exercise. After an online course is completed, the live-fire exercise will be available at a department-provided range day.

In addition to Hunter Education Day, Kentucky Fish and Wildlife offers hunter education opportunities throughout the year. Both in-person and online education options, as well as in-person range days, can be taken at locations across Kentucky. To learn more about and register for these opportunities, visit the department's Hunter Education webpage.

All in-person courses and range days are open to participants who are at least 9 years old and are offered for free, but registration is required for each session. Registered participants are provided with necessary equipment at no charge for use during testing at the ranges. Online hunter education courses are offered by partnering organizations, and some require a fee.

For more information about Kentucky Fish and Wildlife, as well as hunting dates and regulations, visit fw.ky.gov. For questions, please contact the department's Information Center at 800-858-1549, or at info.center@ky.gov, Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. (ET), excluding state holidays.

Ballard Fiscal Court to Hold Second Nuclear-Ready Community Meeting

By: Laurna Todd
KPI Writer

The Ballard County Fiscal Court will hold its second informational and public education meeting Tuesday, Aug. 4, before its regularly scheduled meeting. The session will take place at the Ballard County Courthouse Annex, located at 1718 Barlow Road in Wickliffe.

Cory Hicks, chief executive officer of Paducah Power System, will serve as the meeting’s presenter and educational facilitator.

Hicks was promoted to the utility’s top leadership position following the retirement of longtime CEO Dave Carroll. His previous experience includes leadership roles with Four Rivers Nuclear Partnership and Fluor Federal Services. He also served as chief of staff for former U.S. Rep. Ed Whitfield.

Hicks serves on the boards of Baptist Health and Paducah Bank and is a gubernatorial appointee to the Kentucky Nuclear Energy Development Authority, commonly known as KNEDA.

The Fiscal Court has submitted a letter of intent to KNEDA and begun the application process for Ballard County to become a designated Nuclear Ready Community.

Ballard County Judge-Executive Todd Cooper said the upcoming meeting is intended to address questions and help residents and local leaders better understand the nuclear energy industry and its potential impact on the county.

“We hope to answer any questions the public or county leaders may have about the nuclear ecosystem,” Cooper said. “If we are awarded a Nuclear Ready Community designation, we hope to create more job opportunities for our residents.”

Cooper said four or five businesses currently operating in Ballard County serve as suppliers or contractors for the U.S. Department of Energy.

“These are good-paying jobs,” Cooper said. “We hope to be able to market sites in the county to future supply-chain businesses or DOE contractors to create more jobs.”

The public education meeting will give residents an opportunity to learn more about the Nuclear Ready Community designation, ask questions and hear how county leaders believe the initiative could support future economic development.

Traffic will be shifted onto new U.S. 60 Alignment near McCracken & Ballard County line on August 3

PADUCAH, Ky. – A contractor for the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet (KYTC) plans to open a portion of the new U.S. 60 alignment to traffic near the McCracken-Ballard County Line starting Monday, Aug. 3. Motorists should be prepared for various traffic shifts as crews move vehicles onto the new U.S. 60. Drivers are urged to slow down, watch for flaggers, and use caution while traveling through the work zone. Flaggers and temporary signage will also be in place along old U.S. 60 in Kevil on Monday to direct through traffic onto the new alignment. Motorists should follow directions from flaggers and expect brief delays. The temporary traffic control signs will be removed by the end of the day. Construction will continue on and near the new U.S. 60 alignment over the coming months. Old U.S. 60 will be blocked just west of E. Clarkline Road starting Monday until project completion, which is expected in November. The project includes reconstructing approximately four miles of U.S. 60 from the existing four-lane highway in McCracken County to just west of Kevil, connecting with existing U.S. 60 at the “S” curve. When completed, the new U.S. 60 corridor in this area will be a continuous four-lane highway.

Update from Senator Mitch McConnell and the Office of the Attending Physician

WASHINGTON, D.C. – U.S. Senator Mitch McConnell (R-KY) and the Office of the Attending Physician released the following on Monday, July 27th: “I’m still working hard to get back to my full schedule of work in the Senate and in Kentucky, keeping up with intense physical therapy per my doctors’ orders. Unfortunately, that means I won’t be able to make it to Fancy Farm, Kentucky this Saturday. “There’s no place I’d rather be on the first Saturday in August than with the good people of western Kentucky, feasting on pork and mutton. When I first attended forty-two years ago, Fancy Farm was a pretty lonely place to be a Republican. But, my, how times have changed. Today, western Kentucky is a conservative Republican sea of red. So I hate that I’ll miss the fun this year, but I’m sending my best wishes to the St. Jerome community for a successful picnic. “As always, I appreciate all of your continued well wishes, and I’m looking forward to getting back to the Senate and to Kentucky soon.” From the Office of the Attending Physician (OAP): “Senator McConnell continues his recovery from a fall at home in June. OAP physicians visit with the Senator every day, discussing all aspects of his rehabilitation care. Since his discharge from hospital care, he has maintained a strenuous course of physical therapy and rehabilitation, including multiple sessions a day designed to rebuild strength and reduce the risk of future falls. His bout with childhood polio continues to be a significant factor in his mobility. He is not yet medically cleared to leave the rehab facility and return to the office.”

Senator Mitch McConnell and Secretary Elaine Chao on Sunday, July 26, 2026.

Summer maintenance tips for a thriving vegetable garden

Source: Cindy Finneseth, Extension specialist for community horticulture

Summer is the season when Kentucky vegetable gardens shift into high gear. Warm days and long sunlight hours push plants to grow quickly, but they also bring the challenges of heat, dry spells, weeds, insects and disease. A little steady attention now can make the difference between a struggling garden and one that produces a steady supply of fresh vegetables well into fall.

Watering is the most important task during hot weather. Vegetables grow best when the upper 6 to 8 inches of soil are thoroughly moistened, because this encourages deeper, stronger roots. Shallow watering leads to shallow roots, resulting in poor growth and an increased risk of injury during severe weather. Instead of sprinkling lightly every day, give your garden a slow, deep soaking once or twice a week, depending on rainfall. Early morning is the best time to water so leaves can dry quickly, reducing the chance of disease. Mulching is another powerful tool for summer success. A layer of straw, shredded leaves or other organic mulch helps keep soil moisture steady, reduces temperature swings, and prevents the hard crust that can form on bare soil. Mulch also suppresses weeds, which compete with vegetables for water and nutrients. Keeping weeds under control is essential in midsummer, when they grow just as fast as your crops. Pulling or hoeing them while they are small is far easier than waiting until they take hold. Healthy foliage is essential to a productive garden, so take time to look closely at your plants each time you visit the garden. Leaves that yellow, curl or develop spots may be signaling stress, nutrient issues, insect feeding or disease. Many summer diseases spread quickly when leaves stay wet for long periods, so avoid overhead watering when possible and try not to handle plants when they are wet. Good air circulation also helps leaves dry faster, so give plants enough space and remove any dense weeds growing around them. Summer is also peak season for insect activity. Some insects cause only minor cosmetic damage, but others — like squash vine borers, tomato hornworms, and cucumber beetles — can cause serious harm if not caught early. There is real value in regular scouting: walking through the garden, turning over leaves and checking stems for eggs or feeding damage. Early detection allows gardeners to remove pests by hand or use targeted treatments before problems spread. Beneficial insects such as lady beetles and lacewings can also help keep pest populations in check, so avoid broad, unnecessary pesticide use that might harm them.

Finally, remember that summer care is about consistency rather than intensity. A few minutes every couple of days checking soil moisture, pulling a handful of weeds, looking under leaves and removing and disposing of damaged plant parts goes a long way. Gardens that receive steady attention are far less likely to experience major outbreaks of pests or disease, and they bounce back more quickly from heat stress or dry weather. A little care now leads to baskets of fresh produce later. For help with summer garden care and other home horticulture questions, reach out to your Ballard County Extension office. Programs of the Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service serve all people regardless of race, age, sex, color, religion, disability or national origin. USW & FRNP offering Radiological Control Technician (RCT) training this Fall at WKCTC

Rusty Reynolds
USW Training Coordinator

The United Steelworkers Union (USW) Local 8-550, Four Rivers Nuclear Partnership (FRNP), the Tony Mazzocchi Center, and West Kentucky Community and Technical College Workforce Solutions are partnering to offer a Radiological Control Technician training program. This training opportunity is made possible through a grant awarded to the United Steelworkers by the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences. Applicants must be at least 18 years of age before the start of the program, which is scheduled to begin on Tuesday, October 13, 2026. Space is limited, and all interested individuals must complete the application process to be considered for admission.

Application Requirements:
As part of the application process, applicants must complete the 3 required ACT WorkKeys assessments:
Graphic Literacy ($30) – Minimum score of 5
Workplace Documents ($30) – Minimum score of 5
Applied Mathematics ($30) – Minimum score of 5 Applicants may retake any WorkKeys as many times as needed to achieve the required score. Each WorkKeys assessment has a testing fee of $30 per test.

If selected, applicants are also responsible for the cost of the required drug screening and background check.
The estimated total cost for the required ACT WorkKeys assessments, drug screening, and background check is approximately $155.
Completion of the application requirements does not guarantee acceptance into the program. Applicants must successfully complete all required screenings, achieve the minimum qualifying ACT WorkKeys scores, and be selected through the application process to be admitted into the program.

To register for the required ACT WorkKeys assessments, please contact West Kentucky Community and Technical College Workforce Solutions at (270) 534-3335 to schedule a testing appointment.
Test results from the preceding 12 months can also be used to qualify for the program.

Cost
The cost is $30 per test for the 3 required tests (Graphic Literacy, Workplace Documents, and Applied Mathematics) for an estimated total of $90. Applicants will be required to bring payment to the testing office on the date of the test.

Location
West Kentucky Community and Technical College
5100 Alben Barkley Drive, Paducah KY 42001

Paducah Ky 42001. Please call for appointment time. (270) 442-3668
Each individual who brings a qualified WorkKeys score report will be given an application packet for admission into the program.
Applications will be due back to the USW Local 550 Union Hall by 5:30 PM Thursday, August 20th.
In addition to your WorkKeys scores there are bonus points available to applicants for the following qualifying items:
Military service with honorable discharge – please prove with DD-214
College credit and Degrees – please prove with transcript
Other Certificates – please include copy

Fancy Farm Is More Than Barbecue and Barbs

By: Mike Harmon
State Outreach Director for the Commonwealth Policy Center

Every first Saturday in August, the little community of Fancy Farm reminds the rest of Kentucky of something we sometimes forget in Frankfort and Washington: politics doesn’t belong only to consultants, cable news panels, or campaign war rooms. It belongs to the people. The 146th St. Jerome Fancy Farm Picnic, scheduled for August 1, 2026, will once again draw officeholders, candidates, volunteers, reporters, families, and more than a few folks who come out first for the barbecue, but who also stay for the political fireworks. It is a church fundraiser, a West Kentucky tradition, and—for better or worse—the Commonwealth’s most famous political stage. This year’s gathering is shaping up around major statewide and national questions. Kentucky has an open U.S. Senate seat as Senator Mitch McConnell prepares to leave the office he has held for decades. Congressman Andy Barr and former Representative Charles Booker are expected to be among the names drawing attention. Senator Rand Paul, Congressman James Comer, Lt. Governor Jacqueline Coleman, Attorney General Russell Coleman, Agriculture Commissioner Jonathan Shell, State Senator Jason Howell, State Representative Kim Holloway, and John Drew Williams are also part of the announced lineup, with other statewide officials still pending as of the latest reports. And with the 2026 General Election close at hand, and hints of how 2027 Constitutional Office races might develop, including the Gubernatorial (and maybe the Presidential) race, we may see many of those aforementioned fireworks. It is said that you can’t win Fancy Farm, but you can definitely lose Fancy Farm. And this has been true for several politicians over the years. Thankfully, I was not one of them. During my 21 years serving as an elected official, I had the honor of speaking on the Fancy Farm stage 8 times—once as a candidate for Kentucky State Auditor and 7 times while serving as Auditor. It would have been 9 times total, but one year was cancelled during COVID. If you’ve never been, I would encourage you to go. As a candidate, you stand on the stage looking out into a sea of Democrats on your right side and a sea of Republicans to your left. Rowdy probably doesn’t do justice to the crowds at this event. Each speaker is given a specified time amount, and you must finish before your time, or loud music will play you off the stage. So communicating a good message and staying focused is imperative. Now before my first time on the stage, my consultant wanted to properly prepare me. After I had written my speech, he came by my house to simulate how distracting being on stage might be at Fancy Farm. He had both my wife and my Mom beat on pots and pans and he played very loud music and directed me to give my speech as he timed it. Needless to say, I did not finish on time. After that practice, I rewrote my speech to allow time for distractions and some audience interactions. Booing from the Democrats and cheering from the Republicans were expected and I certainly was not disappointed by the time I got on stage. Also, since Fancy Farm tends to be hot (and I mean really hot), my consultant advised me to drink a lot of water beforehand. And so I did. I drank 7 large cups of water at McDonalds (when their large was much bigger than now) and made sure I took care of other business prior to going on stage. It actually did help. Before the big day, I ran through my speech what seemed like hundreds of times. So much so that my youngest daughter could practically give the speech herself since she was my driver. I was determined to be able to give my speech without using note cards. But when Senator McConnell pulled out a crumbled-up piece of paper at the podium, I thought, “Well if he can use his notes, then I can too.” The speeches traditionally include friendly teasing and joking elbowing, and I always tried to stay within those parameters. Certainly not all did and some got more vicious than you probably should at a Catholic picnic. That first year I stuck with the traditional type of teasing, but at the end of the event, my good friend Jonathan Shell came up to me and said, “You sound just like Jeff Foxworthy.” So, in 2016, when I returned as Auditor and not just a candidate, I started my, “You might be a Liberal Democrat,” tour. Not all years following, but many, I carried a similar theme. In that first year of doing the new routine, I also added a David Letterman-like card flip, much to the excitement of the crowd. After I termed out of office, I must say, I have missed being on the stage at Fancy Farm. I made a lot of friends and enjoyed cutting up on stage. It would be my hope we could get back to that cordial teasing, not only on the Fancy Farm stage but in our politics more broadly. If we can’t debate each other with a little teasing instead of calling people Hitler, etc. with anger in our hearts, I’m not sure how much longer this state or this nation can last. But I have faith that most people want (with help from God) to come together and discuss our differences calmly. Doing that will go a long way towards securing a more perfect union.

Carlisle County Tire Amnesty Program Set for Oct. 8-10

By: Laurna Todd
KPI Writer

Carlisle County residents will have an opportunity to dispose of unwanted tires during the county’s upcoming tire amnesty program scheduled for Oct. 8-10.

911 and Solid Waste Coordinator Larry Fraser announced the dates during the Carlisle County Fiscal Court’s regularly scheduled meeting July 28. Fraser also reported that progress is being made on one property requiring cleanup. However, several property owners have not responded to notices sent by the county, and he plans to follow up with them.

In his 911 report, Fraser said several people have applied for full- and part-time positions. Interviews are expected to be conducted soon.

Road Supervisor Timmy Pearson reported that crews are making their second round of mowing along county roads. Dirty Deeds continues trimming trees along the roadways, while county employees have devoted considerable time to replacing culverts, particularly along high-traffic roads near the school.

Magistrate Adams asked about County Road 1323. Judge-Executive Greg Terry said the area had been inspected and the culvert appeared to be functioning properly, but someone else would be asked to examine it.

Sheriff Eric Perry reported that his office has received 780 calls so far this year. The sheriff’s office will close for half a day July 30 while employees receive training on new tax-collection software.

The court also acknowledged Perry’s 2025 property tax, franchise tax and fire district settlements.

Under new business, magistrates approved the county’s administrative code with the bidding threshold amended to $50,000.

The court reappointed Audrey Huffman and Kristena Black to the Carlisle County Local Health Board. Jailynn Terry, Recie Belcher, Bo Stacy and Lisa Adams were also appointed to the board.

Magistrates approved the Cunningham Fire Department’s fiscal year 2026 financial report and authorized a $1,500 donation to the Burkley Fish Fry, continuing the same level of support provided in previous years.

The court also amended and approved line-item transfers from its July 14 meeting and approved all claims before entering a closed executive session. No action was reported following the session.

The Carlisle County Fiscal Court announced during its July 28 meeting that the county has been awarded a Community Paramedicine grant totaling $544,852.

Terry reported that Ambulance Director Josh Glover applied for the two-part grant on behalf of the county. Additional information will be released after all award documents have been signed.

To prepare for the funding, magistrates unanimously approved adding a federal grant receipt code to the ambulance fund. The court also created expenditure codes for contracted grant labor, administrative expenses and equipment.

Council Advances Grant Efforts, Approves Disaster Aid Resolution

By: Laurna Todd
KPI Writer

The Arlington City Council addressed infrastructure needs, emergency assistance and the city’s upcoming budget during its July 13 regular meeting.

The council approved a resolution allowing Arlington to participate in a statewide disaster aid program. Through the program, participating communities can receive personnel and resources to assist with water system problems and other needs during an emergency.

Council members also approved a resolution connected to the city’s Community Development Block Grant application. City officials reported that Arlington is close to securing the necessary funding and remains in contact with the Purchase Area Development District office.

At the city water plant, a four-inch meter was found to be providing inaccurate readings and must be replaced. One estimate placed the replacement cost at $3,800, while Reveal is expected to submit an additional quote. The council authorized the city to purchase a new meter using the lowest quote received.

The council also reviewed information concerning ongoing PFAS litigation. Although Arlington’s water system has not tested positive for the chemicals, council members voted to allow the city to join the lawsuit in the future if PFAS is detected and the city becomes eligible for compensation.

City Clerk Ayna Dixon presented the proposed 2026-27 municipal budget. After reviewing the document, council members unanimously approved its first reading.

In other business, the council reviewed the annual cost of the city’s insurance coverage and voted to renew its policy with Nelson Insurance.

Dixon reported that a representative met with the council in June to discuss the Arlington Fire Department’s Insurance Services Office rating. The representative will assist the department with required paperwork and testing. The department was advised to request an extension for its ISO report and will reportedly have eight to 12 months after receiving its rating to make improvements.

The city’s four-inch water meter and over-all hydrant testing are among the infrastructure matters that could affect future operations and public safety evaluations.

Nancy Dodge reported that New Commonwealth Gas held a July Zoom meeting concerning municipal contracts. The organization reportedly eliminated its 501(c) status because it did not qualify and purchased 15,000 units of natural gas at $2.88 per unit. Its next meeting was scheduled for July 21.

The council also reported that Arlington Cemetery had been mowed. City employees continued regular mowing duties, and no major water leaks were reported.

Because the council’s June meeting was canceled, members reviewed and approved financial reports, bills and minutes for both June and July. The meeting concluded after all scheduled business was completed.

Sudoku Puzzle

How it Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle! Good Luck!

National Quilt Museum presents Paula Nadelstern: Master of Symmetry

Internationally acclaimed quilt artist brings groundbreaking exhibition and exclusive workshop to Paducah

PADUCAH, KY, — The National Quilt Museum is proud to present Paula Nadelstern: Master of Symmetry, a major exhibition celebrating one of the world’s most influential contemporary quilt artists. On view July 31 through December 30, 2026, the exhibition showcases Nadelstern’s extraordinary quilts, internationally recognized for their dazzling complexity, vibrant color, and breathtaking kaleidoscopic symmetry.

For nearly four decades, Paula Nadelstern has transformed the art of quilting through designs inspired by the mesmerizing reflections of the kaleidoscope. Her quilts explore the intersection of geometry, color, rhythm, and movement, challenging traditional notions of quilt design while demonstrating that quilts are among today’s most sophisticated forms of contemporary art.

“I’ve got to trust in symmetry, rely on detail, commit both random and staged acts of color and understand that the whole will always be greater than the sum of its parts.”

— Paula Nadelstern

Nadelstern’s remarkable career has earned her international acclaim. Her quilt, Kaleidoscopic XVI: More is More, was selected for The Twentieth Century’s 100 Best American Quilts, and in 2009 she became the first contemporary quilt artist to receive a solo exhibition at the American Folk Art Museum in New York. Her quilts have also been featured in solo exhibitions at the International Quilt Museum, the New England Quilt Museum, the Wisconsin Museum of Quilts & Fiber Arts, and museums and galleries throughout Germany and Japan.

A recipient of fellowships from the New York Foundation for the Arts and The Bronx Council on the Arts, Nadelstern is also the author of numerous influential books on quilt design and the creator of more than thirty fabric collections for Benartex, inspiring quilters and artists around the world.

“Paula Nadelstern has fundamentally changed the way we think about symmetry, color, and design in contemporary quilt art,” said Rachael Baar, Curator of The National Quilt

Museum. “Her extraordinary ability to transform complex geometry into breathtaking works of art has inspired generations of quilters around the world. Master of Symmetry gives visitors the opportunity to experience these remarkable quilts up close while gaining a deeper appreciation for the artistry, innovation, and technical mastery that define Paula’s work.”

Learn from a Master

As part of the exhibition, The National Quilt Museum will host The Full Kaleidoscope: Sixty Thirty Plus Sunstar©, an exclusive three-day workshop taught by Paula Nadelstern.

October 1–3, 2026

Designed for intermediate and advanced quilters eager to expand both their technical skills and artistic vision, the workshop explores Nadelstern’s signature machine-piecing techniques, fabric selection, color relationships, and the principles of kaleidoscopic symmetry. Participants will gain firsthand insight into the creative process behind one of quilting’s most celebrated artists while creating luminous quilt designs filled with movement, precision, and dramatic visual impact.

Workshop registration is available through The National Quilt Museum, and space is limited.

Beshear restores Medicaid funding using $255 Million in unexpected state revenue

FRANKFORT, Ky. (KT) — Gov. Andy Beshear announced Wednesday that his administration will use $255 million in unexpected state revenue to restore Medicaid funding that he said had been reduced in the state budget approved by the General Assembly.

Beshear said the move will prevent a 4% reduction in Medicaid payments, ensuring providers and services relied upon by Kentucky families remain fully funded this fiscal year. While the money would typically be deposited into the state’s Budget Reserve Trust Fund, commonly known as the Rainy Day Fund, Beshear said more than $400 million will still be added this year, with total deposits expected to exceed $1 billion by June 30, 2027.

Cabinet for Health and Family Services Secretary Dr. Steven Stack said the budget approved by lawmakers did not include additional funding to cover Medicaid inflationary costs over the next two years, creating significant financial challenges for the agency.

Beshear also said he will ask lawmakers to reopen the second year of the state’s two-year budget when the General Assembly reconvenes in January.

House Speaker David Osborne, R-Prospect, disputed the governor’s claims, saying lawmakers approved more Medicaid funding than Beshear originally requested. Osborne criticized the administration for, in his view, failing to provide evidence that additional funding is needed and accused the governor of unnecessarily alarming Kentuckians about potential cuts. He called for greater transparency and accountability in managing the Medicaid program.

Murray-Calloway Co. Hospital names Amy Ferguson as the June Employee of the Month

MURRAY, KY – Murray-Calloway County Hospital (MCCH) is proud to recognize Amy Ferguson, RD, as its June Employee of the Month in recognition of her outstanding commitment to patient care, employee wellness, and serving others. Amy serves as the Outpatient and Acute Care Dietitian, where she is passionate about helping patients improve their health through proper nutrition and healthy lifestyle choices. Colleagues say her dedication extends far beyond her clinical responsibilities, making a positive impact on patients, coworkers, and the community each day. According to those who nominated her, Amy is always willing to lend a helping hand, regardless of the department or project. She is a strong advocate for both employees and the community, regularly volunteering to support Wellness Works initiatives, hospital events, and community programs.

“Amy truly lives out what we promote” one coworker shared. “She works out regularly at the Center for Health and Wellness, connects with members in a genuine way, and is always willing to encourage others to live healthier lives.” Amy has also served as the instructor for the Center for Health & Wellness 6 a.m. BodyPump class for more than 20 years, inspiring countless participants through her dedication, encouragement, and passion for fitness.

Coworkers describe Amy as someone with an open door, a servant’s heart, and a positive attitude who consistently makes a difference in the lives of those around her. “Amy is one of those coworkers who consistently goes above and beyond.” Another nomination read.” She brings positivity to everything she does, supports her teammates without hesitation, and truly deserves this recognition.”

Murray-Calloway County Hospital congratulates Amy Ferguson on being named June Employee of the Month and thanks her for her exceptional dedication to our patients, employees, and the communities we serve. Paducah lands $100B AI data center project

By TOM LATEK
Kentucky Today

PADUCAH, Ky. (KT) – The U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) announced on Wednesday a landmark partnership to redevelop portions of DOE’s Paducah Site into an artificial intelligence (AI) data center campus accompanied by new affordable energy infrastructure.

The more than $100 billion privately funded investment, one of the largest in Kentucky’s history, includes Brookfield, NextEra Energy, Big Rivers Electric Power Corporation, Jackson Purchase Energy Cooperative, and Paducah Power System; and is expected to create approximately 8,000 construction jobs and 600 permanent jobs.

Consistent with President Trump’s Ratepayer Protection Pledge, officials say the project’s generation and storage capacity would exceed the energy needs of the data center campus, allowing excess electricity to be delivered to the regional grid, helping reduce energy costs for American families and businesses.

At or near the Paducah campus, NextEra Energy plans to develop 2 gigawatts (GW) of new grid-connected natural gas-fired generation, upgrade existing transmission infrastructure, and deploy up to 2.6 GW of battery energy storage to support a new 1.8 GW artificial intelligence and high-performance computing (HPC) innovation campus.

“Thanks to President Trump, the U.S. government is leveraging its assets like our federal lands to add power generation, create jobs, and ensure the United States wins the AI race,” said U.S. Secretary of Energy Chris Wright. “The President’s Ratepayer Protection Pledge ensures America can build the energy infrastructure needed to power the AI revolution while lowering electricity costs for American families and businesses. By transforming former DOE sites into engines of innovation and economic growth, we can revitalize communities with increased tax revenue and thousands of jobs, while also strengthening America’s energy security.”

The project advances DOE’s American Energy Hubs initiative, which is transforming former DOE sites into engines of affordable energy production, advanced manufacturing, technological innovation, and economic growth. Building on the partnership model announced at the Portsmouth Site, the Paducah partnership demonstrates how federal, state, local, and private-sector collaboration can accelerate investment while delivering lasting benefits to surrounding communities.

With existing transmission capacity, water infrastructure, fiber connectivity, and available land, the Paducah Site is uniquely positioned to support large-scale AI infrastructure and attract major private investment while continuing environmental clean-up and advancing the site’s long-term redevelopment.

Construction is expected to be completed in 2031.

Technical graduates not staying in Kentucky, report shows

By TOM LATEK
Kentucky Today

FRANKFORT, Ky. (KT) – Kentucky is successfully producing graduates for its workforce, but many highly skilled technical graduates are leaving for better-paying jobs elsewhere, according to a new report from the Kentucky Council on Postsecondary Education (CPE). It recommends that Kentucky focus graduate-retention efforts on high-demand fields such as computer science, information systems and engineering by expanding competitive jobs, connecting students with employers before graduation and adapting service-linked scholarship programs to encourage graduates to work in the state. Computer science graduates who leave Kentucky earn median wages of $74,222 one year after completing their degrees, compared with $52,187 for those employed in the state, a difference of more than $22,000. Information systems graduates working outside Kentucky earn approximately $11,000 more. “Kentucky has made significant progress in producing the educated and skilled workforce our economy needs,” said CPE President Aaron Thompson. “Now we must ensure more graduates can find competitive, rewarding careers here. Retaining talent requires strong partnerships among colleges, employers, policymakers and communities to create clear pathways from the classroom to Kentucky workplaces.” The report found that Kentucky retains approximately 92% to 93% of certificate, diploma and associate-degree graduates one year after completion. Retention falls to about 82% for bachelor’s- and master’s-degree graduates and 75% for doctoral graduates. “Kentucky retains graduates particularly well in education, health care, manufacturing-related programs and the skilled trades,” said Chris Ledford, CPE’s Director of Data and Advanced Analytics, and the lead research on the policy brief. “Computing and analytics remain the most significant concern among Kentucky’s priority workforce sectors.” The analysis also recommends considering the total number of graduates leaving, not only each program’s retention rate. Business and commerce programs account for approximately 2,070 graduates working outside Kentucky one year after completion, followed by business administration with about 1,630. Even programs with strong retention rates can lose substantial numbers because they produce large graduating classes. Additional recommendations include expanding internships, co-ops and apprenticeships; tying financial support to several years of Kentucky employment; protecting program capacity in fields with strong retention; and regularly reporting graduate outcomes by academic program. The report can be accessed on the Council’s website: <https://cpe.ky.gov/data/reports/2026kygraduatemigrationreport.pdf>.

Kentucky Congress members request quick disaster declaration

By TOM LATEK
Kentucky Today

WASHINGTON (KT) – Sixth District Congressman Andy Barr, R-Lexington, led the Kentucky Congressional Delegation in urging President Trump to swiftly approve Kentucky’s request for a Major Disaster Declaration.

The request follows the devastating storms, flooding, tornadoes, and severe weather that struck communities across the state between June 17-30.

The delegation’s letter expresses strong support for the commonwealth’s request and asks for immediate federal assistance to help Kentucky families and communities recover.

The prolonged weather event caused widespread damage across Kentucky, claiming the lives of six Kentuckians,

Flooding was extreme in Madison County including three residents of Madison County, while destroying homes, damaging businesses, washing out roads and bridges, and leaving thousands without power.

Nineteen counties and 13 cities declared states of emergency as multiple rounds of severe weather compounded the damage over nearly two weeks. Gov. Andy Beshear formally requested a Major Disaster Declaration on July 23.

“Kentucky families have endured an extraordinary stretch of severe weather, and many communities are facing a long road to recovery,” Barr said. “The damage across Central Kentucky, especially in Madison County where lives were tragically lost and neighborhoods were devastated, underscores the urgent need for federal assistance. I’m joining together with the Kentucky Congressional Delegation to urge a swift approval of Kentucky’s disaster declaration request so that our communities have the resources they need to rebuild.”

The letter states in part, “A total of 42 homes were destroyed or rendered uninhabitable, and over 100 businesses have been affected. Many roads, bridges, and electric infrastructure are severely damaged, causing a considerable economic impact across the state. Volunteers along with state and local emergency response organizations have been working tirelessly to clear debris and muck out flooded homes. However, with the recent string of disasters that Kentucky has faced, many disaster response teams in the state are fatigued and overwhelmed. Given the substantial damage and the challenges faced by state and local resources, we believe Federal assistance is necessary.”

The governor’s request seeks federal Public Assistance, Individual Assistance, and Hazard Mitigation funding for affected Kentucky communities.

VICTORIOUS

Living...in a troubled world

The Good Shepherd offers a place where you belong

By Teresa LeNeave
leneave2@comcast.net

In a world marked by uncertainty, the message of the Gospel of Christ continues to offer what we all look for: hope, purpose, and lasting assurance. Scripture teaches when God’s Word is faithfully proclaimed, it will never return without accomplishing its purpose. (Isaiah 55:11). The promise is clear: lives are changed, hearts are strengthened, and faith will bear fruit.

In Psalm 23, David boldly proclaimed, “The Lord is MY Shepherd, I shall not want”. Then he goes on to explain the things he wanted. Peace (green pastures) Leadership (still waters). Hope (restoration of soul). The image of the Good Shepherd provides a powerful picture of God’s care for His people. Unlike human resources that can run dry, the Shepherd’s storehouse is never empty. There is abundant spiritual nourishment for everyone who comes seeking truth. His pasture offers not only wholesome food but also shelter from life’s storms, refreshing water for weary souls, and shade during seasons of hardship. Those burdened by sickness, weakness, or discouragement are not turned away. Psalm 23 says the Good Shepherd provides healing, restores strength, and gently cares for those who are hurting. Like a shepherd tending every need of the flock, He removes what hinders growth, restores health, and renews lives until joy and vitality return. Under His faithful care, the flock flourishes. An atmosphere of peace and security replaces fear and doubt, allowing believers to grow in confidence and faith. Jesus told a parable about one little lost lamb where the Shepherd left the herd to find the lost lamb and bring it home to safety. (Luke 15:3-7). In the parable every sheep is known personally, and none are forgotten. When one wanders from the safety of the flock, the Shepherd immediately notices and lovingly goes in search of the lost until they are found. The Good News is that the invitation remains open to all of us. Those who choose to follow the Good Shepherd discover more than protection—they find a place where they belong. His care creates willing hearts rather than reluctant followers. Drawn by His love and sustained by His provision, His flock receives the nourishment that only God can provide, finding lasting security in His faithful care. David concludes Psalm 23 with “Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life (God’s commitment to David): and I WILL (David’s commitment to God) dwell in the house of the Lord forever.”

Nothing can keep us from the love of God

By William F Holland Jr.

Memories can be wonderful places to visit when they are pleasant and filled with peace and joy. On the other hand, not all of our experiences have been pleasant. Negative thoughts can be more like a haunted house on a dark and stormy night. We all have our own unique collections of thoughts and emotions, which leave us with the task of figuring out a way to deal with them. As most of us know, there are positive ways and negative ways to handle our past experiences, and we can look around and see that some have learned to control their feelings while others allow their thoughts to control them. Who can help? Jesus desires that we give Him our hearts and minds, allowing Him to guide and heal us. Some will say, “You have not walked in my shoes,” and this is true, but with every person being a unique individual, God’s love is universal and can bring contentment, peace, and happiness, whatever the situation might be. His promises are true and cannot fail, no matter what we have been through. He can transform our disappointments and stumbling blocks into victorious stepping stones if we listen and obey his voice. In Psalm 57, we read a story about David, who is in great danger and is hiding in a cave to escape the wrath of Saul. However, even in this dark hour of fear and anxiety, we notice in verse one that he is singing God’s praises: “Have mercy on me, my God, have mercy on me, for in you I take refuge. I will take refuge in the shadow of your wings until this difficulty and burden have passed.” We may face different types of trials and sorrows that are filled with doubt and discouragement, but it comes down to us trusting him, adjusting our attitude, and then intentionally taking shelter in the safety and security of his love. Maybe you were the one who was always selected last for games in gym class, or teased in the neighborhood, or someone spread a hurtful rumor about you that brought shame and anger. Many individuals have a distant relationship with their parents or their children, which is very painful. Others have been betrayed by the one they loved and trusted and are deeply wounded to the core of their soul. Have you ever felt forgotten, rejected, alone, and unwanted?

Emotional suffering can make us feel worthless and hopeless. Maybe you were the one who made mistakes and hurt others, and you feel condemned: the list goes on. Whatever is attacking your conscience and trying to steal your joy, God wants you to know today that he’s here for you, he can transform, restore, protect, forgive, and lead you into the beautiful life he intended you to live. God cares about you more than you can imagine. Even before you were in the womb, the Lord knew you and has never taken his eyes away from you. He knows every thought, sees every tear, and wants a personal relationship with you more than anything. The accuser of the brethren will try to remind us how the damage and consequences cannot be changed, but we can boldly remind the devil that our resentment and negative attitudes have been washed away. Micah 7:19, Isaiah 43:25, and Psalm 103:12 establish that through repentance our sins are gone forever. He now sees us as a new forgiven creation in Christ that can walk confidently in the power and divine truth of his grace and righteousness. Take the time to make a list of everyone who has hurt and offended you in any way. If you are not able to speak to these individuals in person, lay your hand on their name and ask the Lord to help you sincerely forgive them. Harboring bitterness toward anyone is the iniquity of omission. Since giving is associated with receiving, we can be assured that forgiving others allows us to be pardoned. Read the entire chapter of Romans 8, but listen carefully to these verses 35, 37-38. “Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall trouble or hardship or persecution or famine or nakedness or danger or sword? For I am convinced that neither death nor life, neither angels nor demons, neither the present nor the future, nor any powers, neither height nor depth, nor anything else in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus our Lord.” Dr. Holland is a Christian minister, author, and community outreach chaplain. I just returned from one of my Circle Events. You can check them out on my website. But this most recent event was trout fishing in Arkansas. Twelve guys, all trying to catch our limit. We caught a lot of fish and commemorated our accomplishments with a fish-fry on Saturday night. These fish were not only caught by different people, but they were caught using different bait. These guys caught trout using crankbaits, top water, Rooster Tails, corn, shrimp, and worms. And the reason we all used different bait was because each one of us had both conviction and confidence in one particular lure. But while we may have believed our bait was the best, we never shunned, criticized, or disassociated ourselves with those who may have done it differently. In fact, we all celebrated together during that Saturday night fish-fry.

I think followers of Christ can learn from this as we think about those who may not always believe like we do. Did you know (I know you do) that there are numerous denominations just in our country. And not only are there numerous denominations, but there are also different factions in each of those. For instance, there are 30 different

Methodist churches, 20 Presbyterian, 30 Baptist, and 100 Pentecostal churches. Not to mention Lutheran, Christian Disciples of Christ, Charismatic, Catholic, Episcopal, Independent, Mennonite, and the Amish. And I'm sure I've missed a few. The reason is, each one thinks their bait is better than the other. But that is not the problem. The problem, many times, is how we treat those who are using different bait. The problem is how we treat our own family who may disagree with us on secondary matters. And most things are secondary. Let me give you some examples of what we Christians disagree on... Christmas, Halloween, Make-up, Cards, Lottery, Raffle Tickets, Alcohol, Work on Sunday, Clothes, Tattoos, Movie Theatre, Marijuana, Dancing, Music, Version of the Bible, Tobacco, Material Wealth, Day of worship. And yet in all of this, Jesus' last prayer to the Father was, "I am praying not only for these disciples but also for all who will ever believe in me through their message... So they may be one as we are one... May they experience such perfect unity that the world will know that you sent me and that you love them as much as you love me."

Here is what He didn't pray. "God give them exactly what they need to know and do so that each one will walk in lockstep with each other all the time." No, His prayer was that the world would see unity in our diversity so that the world would know that God loves them. And how are we doing? Not. So. Good. But we can change if we will learn that each one of us has different convictions that are based on a host of things from our environment, experiences, parents, DNA, the faith culture we were raised in, and other factors. These have formed what we carry in our tackle box. And while our convictions may be real, let's not let them keep us from having a fish-fry with others who are doing it another way.

READY AND WILLING

Bro. Brandon G. Bramlett
Bandana Baptist Church

I resent rummaging through a cluttered kitchen drawer to find a spatula or spoon. That's why we keep our most frequently used cooking utensils in a bamboo bin next to the stove, where they are easy to reach when needed. I am less inclined to use a knife that is hiding deep within the drawer. If the whisk isn't clean, I won't use it either. I will always use the kitchen tools that are ready for the job and easily accessible.

The Scripture is clear that God delights in using His people when they are readily available for His consecrated use (cf. Exodus 35:5; 1 Chron. 29:9). God wills to use those marked by willingness to do His will. He reaches for those who are "out in the open" and ready to be used by Him, not those who are "hiding out" from their spiritual obligations. Moreover, those sitting around in the sink of sin will not be used for sacred service until they are washed (cf. 2 Timothy 2:20-21). The servants God uses the most are those who have made themselves the most usable.

Ananias was a servant in the Bible who embodied such willingness and availability. St. Luke wrote of him, "Now there was a disciple at Damascus named Ananias. The Lord said to him in a vision, "Ananias." And he said, "Here I am, Lord"" (Acts 9:10). He was ready to serve Jesus with eager hands and a willing heart the moment he heard his name called. Even before he was told the details of his divine assignment, he was prepared to do whatever the Lord required! Without hesitation, inquiry, or complaint, Ananias dropped everything he was doing to serve the Master.

Like Ananias, all of us who know Christ ought to be "all systems go," eager to do the Lord's work. We should jump to our feet when serving God, not drag our feet. Instead of putting off sacred service, we ought to prioritize it above everything else. Instead of burying ourselves in the drawer of our own burdens, we should place ourselves within God's reach. When God calls us to do something, our knee-jerk reaction should be, "Yes, Lord? What do You want me to do? Where do You want me to go?"

The Lord is asking you the same question he posed to Isaiah: "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" And the only right answer to that inquiry is Isaiah's answer: "Here I am! Send me" (Isaiah 6:8). Every believer's heart should beat to the tune of Fanny Crosby's relatable hymn, Lord, Here Am I, which opens like this:

"Master, Thou callest, I gladly obey;

only direct me, and I'll find Thy way.

Teach me the mission appointed for me, what is my labor, and where it shall be.

Master, Thou callest, and this I reply,

"Ready and willing, Lord, here am I."

Salvation

A - Admit to God That You Are A Sinner
For all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God. - Romans 3:23 Repent, turn away from your sin. - Acts 3:19; 1 John 1:9

B - Believe Jesus Died for Your Sins
For God so loved the world that He gave His one and only son, that WHOEVER believes in Him shall not perish but have eternal life. - John 3:16

C - Confess Jesus is Lord
If you confess with your mouth "Jesus is Lord," and believe in your heart that God raised Him from the dead you will be saved. - Romans 10:9

UK to host Summer Forage Tour at Springfield cattle farm Aug. 11

By Jennifer Elwell
University of Kentucky

LEXINGTON, Ky.— University of Kentucky Forages Extension and the Kentucky Master Grazer Educational Program will host the Summer Forage Tour Aug. 11 at Josett Farm in Springfield, Kentucky. The tour begins at 3 p.m. EDT and will feature practical grazing strategies for improving beef cattle pastures.

“This Summer Forage Tour will highlight how a dairy-turned-beef farm is addressing toxic tall fescue with novel endophyte stands, putting native warm-season grasses like Eastern gamma grass and switchgrass into productive use, and rotationally grazing 350 acres with intention,” said Chris Teutsch, Ph.D., Extension forage specialist at the UK Research and Education Center. “Producers will be able to see these strategies first-hand and ask questions about implementation.”

Kentucky cattle producers will learn summer forage feeding strategies at the tour. Photo provided by UK Master Grazer.

John and Jill Settles, who are hosting the tour, have been part of the cattle industry for more than 30 years. After leaving the dairy industry in 2000, they transitioned to beef cattle and have continued building their operation at Josett Farm.

“Hoping to improve their pastures and the land that supports them, the Settles are consistent and patient in their practices, and this shows on their farm,” Teutsch said. “Come for a visit and see for yourself.”

Admission is $10 per person, payable upon arrival. Participants are asked to bring portable seating. Dinner is included, and children eat free. Pre-registration is requested at <https://26summerforagetour.eventbrite.com/>.

The Summer Forage Tour is sponsored by the Kentucky Beef Network and the Kentucky Forage and Grassland Council.

For additional information, please contact Katy Trimble at 270-625-5366 or katy.trimble@uky.edu.

Jill Stowe named UK Ag Equine Programs director

By Holly Wiemers and Derrick Meads
University of Kentucky

LEXINGTON, Ky.— Jill Stowe has been named director of University of Kentucky Ag Equine Programs and Dickson Professor of Equine Science and Management beginning Aug. 1.

Stowe returns to the role a decade after leading the program from 2013 to 2016. Since that time, she has continued to help guide the growth and development of the multidisciplinary program through leadership, instruction and research.

college’s largest undergraduate majors and connects the equine work being done across UK’s land-grant pillars of teaching, research and Extension.

Stowe recently served as director of undergraduate studies for both the equine science and management and the agricultural economics undergraduate degree programs, a role that enabled her to help shape the curriculum for both programs. Additionally, she teaches undergraduate and graduate students and conducts research.

Stowe led the 2012 and 2022 Kentucky Equine Surveys, the 2012 survey being the first comprehensive equine industry study done in Kentucky since 1977. Other recent and notable research Stowe has conducted includes demand considerations for equine veterinary services, including estimating how sensitive horse owners are to changes in prices for equine veterinary services. She has also studied demand for wild horses, demand for equine insurance policies, the profitability of producing Thoroughbred yearlings, and the non-market value of horse farms in Central Kentucky.

“UK Ag Equine Programs is a hallmark of our college’s land-grant mission, bringing together teaching, research and Extension to serve Kentucky’s signature industry,” said Laura Stephenson, vice president for land-grant engagement and dean of Martin-Gatton CAFE. “Dr. Stowe has been an integral part of the program for many years, and her collaborative approach, academic leadership and deep knowledge of the equine industry make her the ideal person to lead its next chapter.”

Prior to joining UK, Stowe was an assistant professor in The Fuqua School of Business at Duke University. She earned her bachelor’s degree in mathematics, summa cum laude, from Texas Tech University and her doctorate in economics from Texas A&M University. Her research areas of interest include equine markets, incentives in individual decision making, decision making under risk and ambiguity, and sports economics.

“Because of the breadth and depth of equine-related expertise at the University of Kentucky, I feel that UK Ag Equine Programs is uniquely positioned to be a leader in the opportunities and challenges facing the future of equine agriculture,” Stowe said. “My primary objective is to actively facilitate teaching, Extension and research activities that will contribute to the future sustainability and growth of equine agriculture locally, nationally and globally.”

Stowe succeeds Jamie Macleod, who has served as director since October 2019.

Beshear demands that McConnell prove he is fit to serve or resign

By JOEY CAPPELLETTI
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kentucky Gov. Andy Beshear, a rising national figure in the Democratic Party, is calling on the state’s Republican Sen. Mitch McConnell to either prove that he is fit to continue serving after his lengthy hospital stay or resign from office.

Beshear made the demand in a letter after McConnell’s office said Monday that the 84-year-old senator had not yet been medically cleared to leave the rehabilitation facility where he has been undergoing physical therapy. The office said he would miss a major Kentucky political event and upcoming Senate votes. McConnell was hospitalized June 14 and disclosed weeks later that it was the result of a fall.

Beshear, who is widely viewed as a potential presidential candidate in 2028, first urged McConnell in early July to release more information about his condition after weeks of public silence. His letter Tuesday marked a significant escalation.

“I am calling on you to directly and verbally address the people of Kentucky and provide proof of your capacity to serve, or resign,” Beshear wrote to McConnell.

Beshear also sent a letter to Senate Majority Leader John Thune, urging him to investigate McConnell’s condition if the senator does not demonstrate that he is capable of continuing to serve.

McConnell and Thune’s offices did not provide comment on the letter.

McConnell, who led Senate Republicans for nearly two decades, has long guarded his personal life. Since he was hospitalized last month, his office has issued major updates on July 12 and July 27, each accompanied by a single photograph.

But public scrutiny of aging elected officials has intensified after several recent health episodes and deaths in office, including the deaths of California Sen. Dianne Feinstein in 2023 and South Carolina Sen. Lindsey Graham earlier this month, as well as President Joe Biden’s decision not to seek reelection after concerns about his age and health became a dominant political issue.

In the absence of regular public updates from McConnell himself, speculation about his condition has grown online.

“All of this speculation and even this letter could have been avoided with a minimal amount of transparency,” Beshear wrote to Thune.

Associated Press reporter Mary Clare Jalonick contributed to this report from Washington.
