Greater Jasper schools welcomes two new teachers

By Laurna Todd
ING Writer

Greater Jasper Consolidated Schools is welcoming Grace Colvin and Melissa Fox to its teaching staff for the new school year.

Colvin will teach sixth-grade science at Jasper Middle School. She is the daughter of John and Linda Colvin and has a sister, Hannah. Outside the classroom, she enjoys reading, building Lego sets and playing pickleball. Her favorite book is The Book Thief, and she lists birria tacos as her favorite food. One of her most memorable adventures was swimming with stingrays.

Fox joins Ireland Elementary School as a music teacher. She and her husband, David, have three children: Luke, 14; James, 12; and Lindsay, 10. Fox enjoys hiking and exploring state and national parks with her family. Her favorite books include Shake Dem Halloween Bones and other children’s sing-along books—fitting choices for an elementary music educator. She also enjoys pizza and says she is skilled at playing Cat’s Cradle.

Both educators bring their own interests, experiences and enthusiasm to Greater Jasper schools as students and staff prepare for the beginning of another academic year.

Jasper honors employees for decades of dedicated service

By Laurna Todd
ING Writer

The City of Jasper has taken time during the past several months to recognize employees whose dedication and faithful service help keep the community running smoothly.

Although presenting an employee with a service award may seem like a small gesture, the recognition carries an important message of appreciation. Each milestone represents years of dependable work, institutional knowledge and commitment to serving Jasper residents.

Those recently honored include Darin Kemp for 20 years of service with the Jasper Gas and Water Department and Gavin Lichlyter for five years with the Jasper Park and Recreation Department.

Several Jasper Street Department employees were also recognized. Tim Berger marked an impressive 45 years of service, while Matt Hochgesang celebrated 15 years. Matt Truesdale was honored for 10 years, and Adam Roth and Ryan Sermersheim were each recognized for five years of service.

The city also congratulated Brian Mathies on his retirement following 40 years of service with the Jasper Wastewater Department.

Together, the employees represent 150 years of service to the City of Jasper. Their work—often performed quietly and behind the scenes—helps maintain the streets, utilities, parks and other essential services residents depend upon every day.

Recognizing these milestones offers the city an opportunity to say thank you while reminding the community of the many dedicated employees it takes to make Jasper a safe, welcoming and well-maintained place to live.

Jasper Fire Department seeking volunteer firefighters

By Laurna Todd
ING Writer

The Jasper Volunteer Fire Department is accepting applications from residents interested in serving their community as probationary volunteer firefighters.

Volunteer firefighters assist with basic firefighting and emergency-rescue duties. Members must be available to respond to fire alarms and other emergencies at any hour, operate firefighting vehicles and equipment as required, complete scheduled weekend station duty and attend meetings and training sessions directed by department leadership.

Applicants must be at least 18 years old and possess a state-accredited high school diploma or equivalent. They must live within Jasper’s corporate limits or no more than two miles beyond the city boundary.

Candidates must also hold a valid Indiana driver’s license, pass a fitness-for-duty physical examination and complete a pre-employment drug screening.

Applications are available from the Jasper fire chief at the Sixth Street Fire Station, 309 E. Sixth St., or from the Personnel Office at Jasper City Hall.

Deaconess Memorial recognized for advancing rural stroke care

JASPER, INDIANA – People who live in rural communities live an average of three years fewer than urban counterparts and have a 40% higher likelihood of developing heart disease and face a 30% increased risk for stroke mortality, according to an American Heart Association’s presidential advisory on rural health. Deaconess Memorial is committed to changing that.

For its efforts to optimize stroke care and reduce gaps in rural health outcomes, Deaconess Memorial has received the American Heart Association’s Get

With The Guidelines® - Stroke Rural Recognition Gold award.

Stroke is the No. 4 cause of death and a leading cause of disability in the U.S, according to the American Heart Association’s 2026 Heart Disease and Stroke Statistics Report. A stroke occurs when a blood vessel supplying the brain is blocked by a clot or ruptures, preventing blood and oxygen from reaching brain tissue. When this happens, brain cells begin to die. Early detection and rapid treatment are critical to improving survival, minimizing disability and supporting faster recovery.

The American Heart Association recognizes the importance of health care services provided to people living in rural areas by rural hospitals that play a vital role in initiation of timely evidence-based care. For that reason, all rural hospitals participating in Get With The Guidelines - Stroke are eligible to receive award recognition based on a unique methodology focused on early acute stroke performance metrics.

“We are proud that our team at Deaconess Memorial is being recognized for the important work we do every day to improve the lives of people in southwest Indiana who are affected by stroke, giving them the best possible chance of recovery and survival,” said Keith Miller, Chief Administrative Officer at Deaconess Memorial.

This recognition goes to hospitals for their commitment to acute stroke care excellence, demonstrated through performance on guideline-directed measures including intravenous thrombolytic therapy, timely hospital inter-facility transfer, dysphagia screening, symptom timeline and deficit assessment documentation, emergency medical services communication, brain imaging and stroke expert consultation.

“Patients and health care professionals in southwest Indiana face unique health care challenges and opportunities,” said Karen E. Joynt Maddox, M.D., MPH, chair of the American Heart Association Quality Oversight Committee and co-author on the Association’s advisory on rural health.

“Deaconess Memorial has advanced the important work of improving care for all Americans, regardless of where they live.”

Are you working in your business or on your business?

Angie Sanchez-Hostetter

As a small business owner, it’s easy to spend every day putting out fires. There’s inventory to order, customers to serve, phones to answer, employees to manage, and a hundred other tasks demanding your attention.

But here’s a question worth asking: When was the last time you worked on your business instead of just in it?

Working in your business means handling the day-to-day operations that keep the doors open. Those tasks are essential, but if that’s all you ever do, it’s easy to lose sight of the bigger picture.

Working on your business means stepping back to evaluate your goals, your marketing, your finances, and your customer experience. It means asking questions like:

Is my business still meeting the needs of my customers?

Are there ways to become more efficient? Am I reaching new customers? What do I want my business to look like a year from now?

Even setting aside an hour each month to think strategically can make a tremendous difference. Sometimes the best investment you can make isn’t buying new equipment or launching a new product, it’s giving yourself time to think.

Businesses don’t grow by accident. They grow because owners are willing to plan, evaluate, and make intentional decisions.

So, this week, challenge yourself to step away from the daily routine, even if it’s just for a little while. Grab a notebook, sit down with a cup of coffee, and think about the future of your business.

The work you do on your business today may be what keeps it thriving tomorrow.

Uplift Johnson County launches campaign to help replace vans for senior transportation

UpLift Johnson County is partnering with Johnson County Senior Services (JCSS) to launch an urgent fundraising campaign after JCSS lost two fleet vehicles to major mechanical issues beyond repair. The organization is asking the community to help replace the vans, which are essential to keeping local seniors connected to the care and resources they depend on.

One hundred percent of every donation to the campaign will go directly toward the cost of a van replacement. Without a full fleet, JCSS has a reduced ability to provide the rides that many Johnson County seniors rely on for their health, independence, and connection to the community.

To help jump-start the campaign, UpLift Johnson County will match the first $15,000 donated, doubling the impact of every early gift. And the goal is closer than it might seem, if just 5,000 people gave $10 each, the campaign would reach its $50,000 target.

“For many Johnson County seniors, transportation is more than just getting from one place to another, it’s access to medical appointments, grocery stores, community programs, and the independence they deserve,” said Wendy McClellan, Executive Director of UpLift Johnson County. “We’re asking our community to help us get these seniors back on the road.”

Each month, JCSS provides more than 360 trips for dialysis treatment alone, in addition to countless other rides that keep seniors healthy, independent, and engaged. Johnson County seniors rely on this transportation for:

Crucial, life-saving medical treatments
Doctor appointments
Prescription pick-ups
Grocery trips
Community programs
Social activities
And much more

Community members can support the campaign by making a donation, becoming a campaign sponsor, or simply spreading the word. Donations can be made online at upliftjoco.org/jcss, where the campaign is tracking progress toward its goal.

Every gift, no matter the size, brings Johnson County one step closer to putting a new van on the road for the seniors who depend on it.

For full details or to donate, visit upliftjoco.org/jcss.

VICTORIOUS Living ...in a troubled world

The Good Shepherd offers a place where you belong

By Teresa A. LeNeave
leneave2@comcast.net

In a world marked by uncertainty, the message of the Gospel of Christ continues to offer what we all look for: hope, purpose, and lasting assurance. Scripture teaches when God’s Word is faithfully proclaimed, it will never return without accomplishing its purpose. (Isaiah 55:11). The promise is clear: lives are changed, hearts are strengthened, and faith will bear fruit.

In Psalm 23, David boldly proclaimed, “The Lord is MY Shepherd, I shall not want”. Then he goes on to explain the things he wanted. Peace (green pastures) Leadership (still waters). Hope (restoration of soul). The image of the Good Shepherd provides a powerful picture of God’s care for His people. Unlike human resources that can run dry, the Shepherd’s storehouse is never empty. There is abundant spiritual nourishment for everyone who comes seeking truth. His pasture offers not only wholesome food but also shelter from life’s storms, refreshing water for weary souls, and shade during seasons of hardship.

Those burdened by sickness, weakness, or discouragement are not turned away. Psalm 23 says the Good Shepherd provides healing, restores strength, and gently cares for those who are hurting. Like a shepherd tending every need of the flock, He removes what hinders growth, restores health, and renews lives until joy and vitality return.

Under His faithful care, the flock flourishes. An atmosphere of peace and security replaces fear and doubt, allowing believers to grow in confidence and faith. Jesus told a parable about one little lost lamb where the Shepherd left the herd to find the lost lamb and bring it home to safety. (Luke 15:3-7). In the parable every sheep is known personally, and none are forgotten. When one wanders from the safety of the flock, the Shepherd immediately notices and lovingly goes in search of the lost until they are found.

The Good News is that the invitation remains open to all of us. Those who choose to follow the Good Shepherd discover more than protection—they find a place where they belong. His care creates willing hearts rather than reluctant followers. Drawn by His love and sustained by His provision, His flock receives the nourishment that only God can provide, finding lasting security in His faithful care. David concludes Psalm 23 with “Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life (God’s commitment to David); and I WILL (David’s commitment to God) dwell in the house of the Lord forever.”

Nothing can keep us from the love of God

By Dr. Billy Holland

Memories can be wonderful places to visit when they are pleasant and filled with peace and joy. On the other hand, not all of our experiences have been pleasant. Negative thoughts can be more like a haunted house on a dark and stormy night. We all have our own unique collections of thoughts and emotions, which leave us with the task of figuring out a way to deal with them. As most of us know, there are positive ways and negative ways to handle our past experiences, and we can look around and see that some have learned to control their feelings while others allow their thoughts to control them. Who can help? Jesus desires that we give Him our hearts and minds, allowing Him to guide and heal us.

Some will say, “You have not walked in my shoes,” and this is true, but with every person being a unique individual, God’s love is universal and can bring contentment, peace, and happiness, whatever the situation might be. His promises are true and cannot fail, no matter what we have been through. He can transform our disappointments and stumbling blocks into victorious stepping stones if we listen and obey his voice. In Psalm 57, we read a story about David, who is in great danger and is hiding in a cave to escape the wrath of Saul. However, even in this dark hour of fear and anxiety, we notice in verse one that he is singing God’s praises: “Have mercy on me, my God, have mercy on me, for in you I take refuge. I will take refuge in the shadow of your wings until this difficulty and burden have passed.” We may face different types of trials and sorrows that are filled with doubt and discouragement, but it comes down to us trusting him, adjusting our attitude, and then intentionally taking shelter in the safety and security of his love.

Maybe you were the one who was always selected last for games in gym class, or teased in the neighborhood, or someone spread a hurtful rumor about you that brought shame and anger. Many individuals have a distant relationship with their parents or their children, which is very painful. Others have been betrayed by the one they loved and trusted and are deeply wounded to the core of their soul. Have you ever felt forgotten, rejected, alone, and unwanted? Emotional suffering can make us feel worthless and hopeless. Maybe you were the one who made mistakes and hurt others, and you feel condemned: the list goes on. Whatever is attacking your conscience and trying to steal your joy, God wants you to know today that he’s here for you, he can transform, restore, protect, forgive, and lead you into the beautiful life he intended you to live. God cares about you more than you can imagine. Even before you were in the womb, the Lord knew you and has never taken his eyes away from you. He knows every thought, sees every tear, and wants a personal relationship with you more than anything. The accuser of the brethren will try to remind us how the damage and consequences cannot be changed, but we can boldly remind the devil that our resentment and negative attitudes have been washed away. Micah 7:19, Isaiah 43:25, and Psalm 103:12 establish that through repentance our sins are gone forever. He now sees us as a new forgiven creation in Christ that can walk confidently in the power and divine truth of his grace and righteousness. Take the time to make a list of everyone who has hurt and offended you in any way. If you are not able to speak to these individuals in person, lay your hand on their name and ask the Lord to help you sincerely forgive them. Harboring bitterness toward anyone is the iniquity of omission. Since giving is associated with receiving, we can be assured that forgiving others allows us to be pardoned. Read the entire chapter of Romans 8, but listen carefully to these verses 35, 37-38. “Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall trouble or hardship or persecution or famine or nakedness or danger or sword? For I am convinced that neither death nor life, neither angels nor demons, neither the present nor the future, nor any powers, neither height nor depth, nor anything else in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus our Lord.”

Outdoor Truths: Just things

At least once a year I fish the Powell River with my friend, Michael. We live about an hour from each other, so these trips are planned a few weeks in advance. Our preferred way of fishing is with light tackle in kayaks. We both love everything the river offers. The Powell is a small river, and while there are some larger smallmouth bass, most of our trophies measure less than 15 inches. But the fight they put up, combined with the pull of the current, gives us plenty of thrills and hours of enjoyment. I am new to the river compared to Michael. My river fishing started only about 15 years ago. Michael’s began when he was a child with his dad and brother. Every time we go, I hear stories and lessons from those days on the river. Ed (his dad) was a local postal worker who spent his spare time floating from one stretch of river to the other. He knew every place to put in and take out. Of course he had his favorite bait. And back then, it wasn’t kayaks, but Jon boats. A mess of redeyes was as good as any meal you could buy at the local grocery store. While I knew Michael and his whole family as a teenager, I never knew the priorities of his dad. What I’ve learned from our fishing trips is that Ed had a great sense of what was truly valuable. And what he valued most was what money couldn’t buy. I learned this after hearing story after story about how the river would sometimes swallow rods, reels, and anchors. Not to mention glasses, knives, and other tackle. While Ed and the boys had to learn to “deep-sea-diver” to try to retrieve these things when lost, Ed would eventually remind them that they were just that. Things. Replaceable things. There is nothing – no thing- that can trump the value of time on the river, especially the ones with your sons. Rods will be broken. Reels will be lost. The river will claim whatever isn’t tied down. But the value of those memories will never diminish. In fact, with each passing year, they will become more valuable. How do I know? I hear it in every story Michael tells. I hope the things you value can’t be bought, bent, or broken. I hope they’re found in experiences, adventures, and people – maybe even in the moments that involve losing or breaking those things that were, after all, only things.

Farm Bureau encouraged by Senate Farm Bill Markup Schedule

American Farm Bureau Federation President Zippy Duvall today applauded the release of farm bill text and notice of a Senate Ag markup for next week.

“When you look across the spectrum of agriculture, there is one piece of legislation that touches almost every farm in America, and that’s the farm bill, so it’s time for Congress to get it done.

“We’re grateful to Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman John Boozman for releasing farm bill text and are encouraged that we can achieve a bipartisan bill that can get across the finish line. We appreciate the Administration’s call for Congress to move this process forward and urgently deliver a farm bill to the President’s desk.

“The bill includes important provisions beyond traditional farm bill program support, including authorizing the sale of E15 blended fuel year-round, expanding investments in specialty crops and measures to reduce input price volatility. We’re also calling on Congress to deliver a fix for interstate commerce issues as well as much-needed economic aid for agriculture.

“We’ve lost 200,000 farms in a decade, and a modernized farm bill will help stabilize the struggling farm economy. We’re calling on the Senate Agriculture Committee to advance the bill out of markup and send it forward for full Senate passage and ultimately the president’s signature.”

Secretary Rollins announces continued growth of USDA’s Product of USA label with six additional companies joining initiative

(Washington, D.C., – U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Brooke L. Rollins today announced six additional meat and poultry companies have adopted USDA’s voluntary Product of USA (POTUSA) label, continuing the strong momentum behind the Trump Administration’s efforts to help consumers easily identify products that are truly born, raised, harvested, and processed in the United States.

As more processors adopt the Product of USA label, American families have greater confidence that when they purchase products bearing the claim, they are directly supporting American farmers, ranchers, processors, and rural communities.

“Product of the USA label is a win for American farmers, ranchers, processors, and consumers alike, and we are continuing to see companies respond to this demand,” said U.S. Secretary Brooke Rollins. “American consumers want to know where their food comes from, and they deserve labels they can trust. Every new company that adopts Product of USA is helping strengthen rural America, create new market opportunities for U.S. producers, and make it easier for families to support American agriculture every time they shop.”

The newest companies to adopt USDA’s Product of USA label include:

- Creekstone Farms – Kansas
- Caviness Beef Packers
- CS Beef Packers –

Ranchers (SPUR) Program, a $500 million investment to help eligible small- and mid-sized beef processors preserve and expand domestic processing capacity. Together, these efforts are strengthening America’s meat supply chain, expanding opportunities for U.S. producers, and increasing consumer access to high-quality American-raised products.

USDA continues to receive strong interest from processors across the country, with additional companies expected to adopt the Product of USA label in the coming months as consumer demand for authentic American-produced meat and poultry continues to grow.

Texas Greener Pastures – Texas Lone Star Beef Processors – Texas Claxton Poultry Farms – Georgia The continued expansion of the Product of USA label complements President Trump’s and Secretary Rollins’ broader strategy to strengthen America’s livestock industry by supporting independent ranchers, family farmers, and domestic meat and poultry processors. By creating new market opportunities for products that are fully American from pasture to plate, USDA is helping producers and processors compete, grow, and meet rising consumer demand for American-raised meat.

The Product of USA initiative also complements USDA’s Strengthening Processing for U.S.

USDA asks partners to develop AI solutions to accelerate crop innovation

(Washington, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) is taking steps to speed up progress in plant science by calling on universities and stakeholders to help build new AI tools that can translate the huge amount of germplasm data the agency collects.

Through the Genesis Mission and the Agriculture Advanced Research and Development Authority (AgARDA), USDA is expected to launch an Agricultural National Science & Technology Challenge later this year. The Challenge will ask innovators to create practical solutions that pull together different types of information—like images, field data, and lab results—so scientists can quickly spot important plant and seed traits and develop crops that are more resilient and productive.

“USDA is taking concrete steps to give scientists the modern tools they need to innovate agricultural solutions from the vast plant data that they collect,” said

REE Under Secretary and USDA Chief Scientist Dr. Scott Hutchins. “When our partners help us to solve agricultural challenges by using AI tools, we’ll unlock faster discoveries with germplasm data and grow better crops that strengthen our food system for many future generations.”

The Genesis Mission, launched in November 2025, is a national effort coordinated by the White House Office of Science and Technology

Policy to leverage artificial intelligence to accelerate scientific discovery. The Mission will bring together America’s scientists, top innovative businesses, world-renowned universities; and data repositories, production plants, and national security sites — to use AI tools to solve the nation’s most complex science and technological challenges. Challenge teams will have access to the American

Science and Security Platform, DOE-built shared infrastructure that will connect datasets, scientific instrumentation, and AI tools to accelerate discovery.

More details on the Challenge are forthcoming. Proposing teams are encouraged to read the full Genesis Mission Executive Order and bring their best ideas to advance America’s future in germplasm innovation.

USDA, HHS, EPA join forces to bolster consumer protections

(Washington, D.C., — Today, U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Brooke L. Rollins, U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services Robert F. Kennedy, Jr., and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Lee Zeldin announced an updated Memorandum of Understanding (PDF, 2.3 MB) to reaffirm their shared commitment to protecting consumers from heavy metals and other contaminants in food.

For decades, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) have coordinated through the National Residue Program to monitor and regulate meat, poultry, and egg products. This updated MOU strengthens collaboration under this program and adopts new methods to better detect and address potential risks.

“American farmers, ranchers, and producers grow and raise the safest, most abundant, and most affordable food supply in the world. Together with our partners at HHS and EPA, we are strengthening the health of American families and giving consumers confidence in the safety of our food supply,” said Secretary Rollins. “This new MOU modernizes how our agencies work together and streamlines the way we share information, coordinates scientific expertise, and improves how we detect and address potential risks. This is the Trump Administration improving the way our government works so we can better protect the American people and ensure the safety of our food supply, which is truly a national security and health priority.”

“Protecting Americans from harmful contaminants in food is a core priority of the Trump Administration,” said HHS Secretary Kennedy. “We are strengthening oversight, improving detection, and coordinating across the federal government to reduce exposure to heavy metals and other toxins. I appreciate Secretary Rollins and Administrator Zeldin for their leadership as we work together to protect American families and Make America Healthy Again.”

“At the Trump EPA, we are excited to help advance new policies to Make America Healthy Again. Today’s announcement ensures a safer food supply by supporting new testing methods to reduce metal residues in produce, meat, and, for the first time ever, processed foods,” said Administrator Zeldin. “We want Americans to feel confident the food on their plate has been held to the highest standards of safety. It’s an honor to serve on the MAHA Commission, led by Secretary Kennedy, working with great partners like Secretary Rollins to pave the way for a healthier nation for generations to come.”

As part of this effort, the USDA Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) has already taken steps to modernize monitoring for heavy metals in foods by implementing a new, streamlined laboratory method to measure the quantity of 18 heavy metals at extremely low levels. If elevated or unusual levels are detected, FSIS conducts science-based assessments to determine when the agency should take action to keep risky products out of the food supply. Additionally, FSIS will also expand its surveillance for heavy metals to include processed foods, such as sausages and ready-to-eat meals, which combine ingredients from multiple sources.

The data collected by FSIS shows heavy metal contamination of raw meat and poultry products is extremely rare and FSIS will continue to publish results of this surveillance testing online, ensuring transparency for industry and consumers.

This updated MOU further advances efforts to Make America Healthy Again (MAHA) and builds on the MAHA Report’s goal of reducing children’s exposure to heavy metals, PFAS, and other harmful contaminants.

Sudoku Puzzle

How it Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle! Good Luck!

Greater Jasper Schools to lead countywide digital wellness initiative

By Laurna Todd
ING Writer

Greater Jasper Consolidated Schools will lead a new countywide effort to help children and families develop healthier relationships with phones, tablets, social media and other forms of digital technology.

The “Screens in Balance: Dubois County Digital Wellness” initiative was selected for support through the Being for Others Health & Wellness Foundation’s 2026 Community Collaboration Grant program. The foundation has committed up to $500,000 for two collaborative projects serving Dubois and Orange counties.

Greater Jasper will serve as the lead organization for the Dubois County initiative. Partners include Northeast Dubois County School Corporation, Southeast Dubois County School Corporation, Southwest Dubois County School Corporation, the Dubois County Health Department, Crisis Connection and the Dubois County CARES Coalition.

By involving all four county school corporations and organizations that work directly with children and families, the project is designed to address digital wellness as a communitywide concern rather than an issue limited to individual classrooms or households.

The collaboration will examine the effects excessive screen use may have on students’ anxiety levels, sleep, attention and overall well-being. It will also promote healthy routines, emotional regulation, positive social connections and a more balanced use of technology.

The long-term goal is to help students focus, participate and succeed academically and socially while giving parents and caregivers practical support for establishing healthy digital habits at home. The planning process will allow schools and community organizations to identify current resources, determine where additional support is needed and develop a consistent approach that can be used throughout Dubois County.

Greater Jasper Consolidated Schools will receive $50,000 during the first year for a facilitated planning process. Representatives from education, public health and community organizations will work together to study the issue, gather community input, identify gaps and create an implementation plan based on research and local needs.

Following the planning phase, the Dubois County collaboration will be eligible to receive up to an additional $200,000 over a two-year implementation period. Additional community partners interested in improving digital wellness are also being sought.

BFO developed the Community Collaboration Grant program following a 2025 strategic planning process conducted with assistance from Bank of America consultants and community volunteers. The process examined national grant-making practices and ways philanthropy can help rural communities develop larger, long-term solutions to complicated health and wellness challenges.

The 2026 selection process began with a letter of intent period, followed by an invitation-only application process and in-person presentations. BFO received 21 letters of intent from organizations throughout its eight-county service region. Four finalists were invited to present their proposals before the two recipients were selected.

Team OC was selected to lead the second project, the Orange County Bridge to Stability Housing Collaborative. That initiative will bring together schools, government agencies, law enforcement, health care providers, financial institutions, churches and nonprofit organizations to address housing instability and help prevent homelessness.

Team OC will also receive $50,000 for its first-year planning process and will be eligible for up to $200,000 during the following two years.

The grant program was structured to provide initial funding without requiring recipients to secure matching dollars in advance. BFO hopes the seed funding and collaborative planning process will help the organizations attract additional support and investment as their projects develop.

BFO plans to continue funding the Community Collaboration Grant program over the next five years. The next letter of intent period is expected to open in January 2027, with an additional selection round anticipated in 2028.

The Being for Others Health & Wellness Foundation was established through a $20 million endowment resulting from the 2024 affiliation between Memorial Hospital and Health Care Center and Deaconess Health System. The private nonprofit foundation supports health and wellness efforts in Crawford, Daviess, Dubois, Martin, Orange, Perry, Pike and Spencer counties.

Dubois County Democratic Party brings “Your Community, Your Say” town hall to Jasper

Jasper– Neighbors from across Dubois County and beyond are invited to a community town hall on Thursday, August 6, at KlubHaus61, 2031 N Newton St in Jasper. Doors open at 6:30 PM and the program begins at 7:00 PM. It is the second in the series of Big Tent town halls hosted by the Dubois County Democratic Party.

The first of these filled the community center in St. Anthony on July 22, with more than sixty people in a town of about two hundred and forty. Word has traveled since, and residents from several neighboring counties have said they plan to make the drive to Jasper. The organizers took notes as well. Each town hall is built for the community hosting it and for the decisions in front of that community right now, and Jasper’s has been rebuilt from the last one: a different subject, a different set of guests, a different format.

“If you remember the Phil Donahue show, that’s the idea,” said Angie Nehmer, who moderated the first town hall in St.

Anthony. “No podium, nobody standing up front giving a speech. Four or five guests around a coffee table, and a microphone that comes out to you. And there’s no such thing as a dumb question. If you’re sitting there wondering about something, I promise you somebody else in that room is wondering the same thing.”

The party is organizing and paying for the evening, and has handed the microphone to a Republican. Jason McCoy, a familiar voice at Property Rights Alliance meetings across the county, will moderate. That is deliberate: this is not a party meeting and it is not a rally.

The subject is the part of local government nobody ever explains to you: who actually decides, and how you find out in time to do anything about it.

Consider one example from the same evening. While sixty people were in St. Anthony asking how these decisions are made, the Jasper City Council was making one. The council took up the city’s membership in the Mid-States Corridor Regional Development Authority. Three options were on the table, and the city attorney confirmed all three ended on the same date in December 2027, including the one labeled withdrawal. There was no option to leave any sooner. That date came from a legal opinion the RDA board itself had obtained, in an area the city’s attorney described as uncharted, with no case law defining how any of it was supposed to work. The council voted 5-2 to take no action, and two members voted no anyway, on principle. So who decides what goes on an agenda, and what stays out? Who writes the ordinance, and who decides which choices a council gets to pick from? Is the attorney in the room there to advise, or to decide? Nobody asked you, and nobody explained it. Those questions have answers, and most residents have no idea where to go looking for them. They are the same questions every time. From local income tax to property taxes, solar farms and battery storage, data centers and what they bring with them: the projects are the evidence, not the agenda.

The guest list is short on purpose, four or five people with varied political backgrounds in the same conversation. They don’t always agree with each other, and that is the point. Nobody is asked to change their mind about anything, and nobody is asked to check their party at the door. Guests include Brad Hochgesang, Democratic candidate for Indiana State Senate District 48, and Tiffanie Arthur, candidate for Indiana State House District 63, joined by Republican and Independent voices from around the county.

The Property Rights Alliance is canceling its own regular meeting so its members can attend, and other civic groups around the county have told organizers their people will be there. Every elected official in Dubois County is invited, not to be put on trial but to help explain how the sausage actually gets made. Candidates for local, statewide, and national office will be in the audience rather than on the stage, introduced at the start of the evening so residents know exactly who is in the room and can ask them questions directly. People will notice who shows up.

“This is not a Democratic Party meeting. We are organizing it, we are paying for it, and then we are getting out of the way,” said Dennis Tedrow, chair of the Dubois County Democratic Party. “A Republican is running the microphone, a good share of the room will be Republicans, and they are welcome. Roads, taxes, and what gets built where do not sort neatly by party. We want to know where we actually disagree, and where we actually agree. We would rather hear that from you than through the grapevine.”

“When I ask for your vote, I’m asking you to be my boss,” said Brad Hochgesang, Democratic candidate for Indiana State Senate District 48. “I’d make a poor employee if I never asked what the job was. So come Thursday and tell me — what should this office be doing for you, and what has it been doing instead? If you’re one of the people most affected by these decisions, I especially want to hear from you. You’re the one who almost never gets asked.”

Residents are encouraged to bring questions, and can send them ahead of time to the Dubois County Democratic Party by email or through social media.
