

Memorial Medical Center Foundation welcomes Craig Buse and Clara Fromme to Board of Directors

Jasper, Indiana — The Memorial Medical Center Foundation is pleased to announce the addition of Craig Buse and Clara Fromme to its Board of Directors.

Craig Buse joined Springs Valley Bank & Trust Company in 2002 and has held a variety of leadership roles throughout his tenure, currently serving as President & CEO. His leadership is grounded in a strong background in technology, strategic planning, and community banking, with a focus on innovation and relationship-driven service.

Clara Fromme is a lifelong educator, volunteer, and community leader whose impact has rippled across generations in Dubois County. A revered English teacher at Jasper High School for over three decades, Fromme chaired the English Department for 25 years and was instrumental in launching dual credit programs, a Shakespearean Festival, and literary recognition initiatives like the Derexa King Award. Her devotion to excellence in education earned her repeated accolades from students and institutions alike, including a Lilly Endowment Teacher Creativity Fellowship, which took her to England and Canada to “walk where Shakespeare walked.” Fromme is added as an ex-officio member of the board as the active President of the Memorial Medical Center Auxiliary.

“We are thrilled to welcome Craig and Clara to the Memorial Medical Center Foundation Board,” said Deidra Church, Director of the Memorial Medical Center Foundation. “Their extensive leadership experience, strategic mindset, and deep commitment to strengthening our communities will be tremendous assets as we continue advancing our mission in support of patient care, caregivers, and healthcare excellence.”

Buse holds a Bachelor of Science in Computer Science and a master’s degree in information security from Capella University. He is a 2012 graduate of the Graduate School of Banking in Madison, Wisconsin, and completed the Dubois County Leadership Academy in 2011. In 2009, he was recognized as a “Rising Star” by the Independent Community Bankers of America (ICBA), highlighting his forward-thinking approach and commitment to excellence in community banking. In addition to his role at Springs Valley, Buse is actively involved in regional economic and community development efforts. He currently serves on the boards of RADIUS Indiana, Dubois Strong, Indiana Small and Community Development Corporations (ISCDC), the Southwestern Indiana Child Advocacy Center Coalition (SWICACC), and the Spencer County Economic Development Authority (SCEDA), where he works to foster collaboration and sustainable growth across Southern Indiana. Buse resides in Spencer County with his wife, Erika, and their two sons, Chase and Colton. He is passionate about strengthening communities through innovative banking solutions and meaningful relationships.

Craig Buse

Fromme’s spirit of service is evident throughout the community. At Deaconess Memorial Medical Center, she leads the Auxiliary Board and volunteers weekly, offering a warm presence to patients and guests. She coordinates the Festival of Christmas Trees at the Dubois County Museum, helps organize the Diocese of Evansville’s Wisdom Day for seniors, teaches religion at her parish, and makes monthly visits to the elderly and sick. From leading parish bus trips and hosting international guests, to donating blood and writing holiday cards for veterans, Fromme shows up with compassion and creativity wherever she’s needed. A published historian of her hometown of Celestine, Fromme has chronicled the community’s past with care, preserving its legacy for future generations. Her faith, humility, and quiet leadership have made her a role model to students, colleagues, and community members alike.

“We would like to thank outgoing board member Rachel Huls for her time on the board and her commitment to furthering the mission of the Memorial Medical Center Foundation,” said

Clara Fromme

Michael Kern, Chair of the Memorial Medical Center Foundation Board. “Craig and Clara are great additions to our board and bring a unique blend of financial expertise, technological insight, and community-focused leadership. Their perspectives will be invaluable as the Foundation continues to grow its impact across the region.”

Buse and Fromme join 16 other community members and Deaconess Memorial Medical Center staff who serve on the Foundation’s board: Keith Miller (Foundation President), Michael Kern (Board Chairperson), Tina Weisman (Vice-Chairperson), Chad Hoffman (Treasurer), Kendra Rottet (Secretary), Sr. Renee Cunningham, LCM, Dr. Christian Duncheon, Sarah Leonard, Susan Mann, Abby Schmitt, Kathy Sigler, Sonya Seufert, Steve Wigand, Ex-Officio Members Angie Anderson, Deidra Church, and James Huebner, and Emeritus Members E. Kyle Bennett and Bill Rubino.

Since 1974, the Memorial Hospital Foundation has been a beacon of hope, stewarding philanthropic gifts to advance Deaconess Memorial Medical Center’s services, assist patients in need, and support the communities it serves. The Foundation’s impact is evident, having assisted over 13,000 patients and granted over $1,684,809 in funds in the last fiscal year, all thanks to the generosity of our donors. Donations made to the Memorial Medical Center Foundation remain local to support the counties Deaconess Memorial Medical Center serves. Auditions for ‘The Murder was Staged’ to be held this weekend

JASPER, IN — Actors Community Theatre is excited to announce auditions for its upcoming dinner theatre production of “This Murder Was Staged” by Patrick Greene and Jason Pizzarello. Performances will be held on March 26th-29th, 2026, at the Jasper Arts Center. It’s opening night of a brand-new mystery play, but just as the killer is about to be revealed, the body of the play’s director falls onstage instead. In that moment, the theater becomes an active crime scene, and everyone from cast to crew to even the audience becomes a suspect. But how is the intrepid detective supposed to find the killer when everyone and their mother (literally) has a motive to want the demanding director gone? “This Murder Was Staged” is a fast-paced, backstabbing, backstage comedy from two of the writers of The Alibis and Rogues’ Gallery.

Auditions for “This Murder Was Staged” will be held at the Thyen-Clark Cultural Center Black Box Theatre, located at 100 3rd Avenue, Suite A, Jasper, Indiana on Friday, January 16th, 2026, from 6:00PM EST to 8:00PM EST, and Saturday, January 17th, 2026, from 2:00PM to 4:00PM EST.

Those who plan to audition should arrive at the start of auditions and stay for the entire duration. Those ages 18 and up are invited to audition.

Those auditioning will be asked to do a cold reading from the script and will be asked to read for multiple characters and multiple scenes.

Auditionees should also bring a list of schedule conflicts through March 29th, 2026. Absences during the last two weeks of rehearsals leading up to tech week are not permitted.

Additional questions may be directed to info@actorscommunitytheatre.com. Or visit <https://www.actorscommunitytheatre.com/thismurderwasstaged> for more information.

Tammy Guth files for County Recorder

Tammy Guth

Tammy Guth has filed to seek the Republican nomination for the office of Dubois County Recorder in the May 2026 primary.

She has served as the Chief Deputy Recorder since January 1, 2019 and would love the opportunity to continue to serve the citizens of Dubois County by recording and preserving your land records.

Guth is a 1993

graduate of Southridge High School, and is a resident of Huntingburg, IN. She earned her degree in Paralegal studies at Vincennes University in 1995, and achieved her certificate with NACO’s High Performance Leadership Academy. In addition, she earned her first certificate of Excellence with the Association of Indiana Counties. These early accreditations will benefit her in serving as the next Recorder of Dubois County.

She is a member of the Dubois County Republican Party, has volunteered at the Tri-County YMCA, and as an assistant leader for the Huntingburg Girl Scouts. She has served as secretary at St. James Lutheran Church in Holland, and is a member of Redemption Christian Church in Jasper. She supports her community veterans as an Auxiliary member at the Huntingburg VFW Post 2366. She supports the Dubois County Right to Life and looks forward to becoming more involved in the organization.

Tammy has two children, Landon and Brooklyn. She has enjoyed many summers on her grandparent’s farm in Holland, IN where she has learned the value of hard work and is an advocate for small town values. Having served over seven years as Chief Deputy in the Recorder’s Office, she possesses the depth of knowledge and hands-on experience needed to step up and serve effectively as your next County Recorder. She looks forward to the opportunity to continue to serve our county and community.

VICTORIOUS

Living...in a troubled world

There is no substitute for perseverance

By Dr. Billy Holland

When it comes to finding our place in this world, let’s consider two categories. The first one, let’s call “floating down the river.” Imagine someone napping in a small boat without a compass or a paddle and not caring about where they are going. Having a spectator mentality, they have yet to understand the importance of having an intentional direction and instead settle for just hoping for the best. They are comfortable with what they do not know and believe that everything will somehow be alright. Our second way of thinking involves listening and developing an awareness of our personal accountability to ourselves, those around us, and, of course, God, the one who made us. Until we embrace the reality that He has a specific meaning and purpose for our lives, we will not fulfill our potential.

As a substitute teacher, I have the honor to help children learn, and while in this position, I observe different types of personalities and attitudes. I notice that those who are eager to absorb knowledge and excel are enthusiastic about all subjects. I believe when kids are encouraged at home, and education is a priority, this transfers over to the student as it opens their eyes to encouraging possibilities and opportunities. On the other hand, when children are looking out the window and doodling on their papers instead of answering the questions, it seems they are not only bored with the subject matter, but have made a mental decision to refuse to learn. Do some have a resistance to change because they are afraid of failing?

Being a minister, I also volunteer at our local detention center a couple of times a month, where I speak to the inmates about God and the Christian life. For those who ask God to intervene, and agree to let go of their ways, our team will baptize and serve them communion, and try to help them all we can. I’ve heard some heartbreaking stories from these individuals, and often, they testify about having a hard life at home when they were kids. They lost interest in school, started running with a bad crowd, and it’s been a downhill slide ever since. Some admit they are on the bottom, with terrible personal problems, and have burned every bridge, but of course, it’s never too late to ask for God’s help.

God’s love encourages and motivates us, but another aspect of success is to realize there are certain conditions and responsibilities on our part for His plan to be fully activated. It will require surrendering our will to him. You see, with God being the Potter and us being the clay, it’s critical to accept the fact that we do not conveniently add God to the plans we already have, but rather we must allow Him to transform us into His brand new creation. One of the basic attitudes I see all the time is “I don’t care.” So what makes people rise from the ashes of apathy, rebellion, and discouragement? Well, personal change is not easy, and anyone who advertises how wonderful it is to sacrifice, suffer, and step into a lifestyle completely opposite to their comfort zone is not being honest. There’s nothing wrong with reading books about how others have conquered their demons, but even if someone understands what it will take, this does not automatically mean they will do it.

Sadly, many are only trying to survive today, without a desire to plan for tomorrow. If you’ve ever tried to help someone find their direction, you understand when I say we cannot force anyone to do anything, especially those who are not willing to help themselves. In every area of life, the ones who desire a healthy state of being must comprehend the truth about their own responsibilities and be willing to do something about it. Beyond the motivational seminars, the Bible studies, and achievement formulas, it will take a personal revelation, an enlightenment of the mind and soul, to have faith in ourselves the way God has hope in us. Whether we are young or old, being an overcomer requires seeking, praying, and working, and living in denial and blaming everyone for our problems only makes it worse. I have compassion for those whose parents failed them and know those who still struggle from neglect. Life has always seemed like a huge mountain that was impossible to climb. There is no substitute for perseverance, as it’s true, “We cannot lower the mountain, therefore we must elevate ourselves.”

Watching for wolves

By Brandon Bramlett
Pastor - Bandana Baptist Church

Something curiously chilling was creeping across the urban parks of New York City. “Tracks were etched in the crusted snow, doglike but more oblong, the claws less prominent and, over all, more compact,” the New York Times reported in 2015. Out of concern for the public’s safety, park officials deployed sensor cameras around the parks to identify the beast responsible for the unusual tracks. They were shocked to discover an animal scarcely seen scurrying about the Big Apple—one that had infiltrated the city in substantial numbers: coyotes. New Yorkers never expected the grizzled-gray critters to journey from plains and forests to the big city, but as Lisa Foderaro, a reporter for the New York Times, observed, “A predator, though rarely seen, is in New York City to stay.”

The Bible warns of an animal far deadlier than coyotes, one that scurries and sneaks in to wreak havoc—and it just so happens to be the coyote’s kinfolk: wolves. No—not literal wolves, but spiritual wolves who exploit the feeble and devour the naive. Jesus admonished, “Beware of false prophets, who come to you in sheep’s clothing but inwardly are ravenous wolves” (Matthew 7:15). Their teaching is cushy and cuddly like the wool of a sheep. They seem harmless as sheep because they always preach what you want to hear (2 Timothy 4:3). But the Scripture is clear: they are “deceitful workmen,” disguising themselves like the devil who commissioned them (2 Corinthians 11:13). Their deadly tracks are found in the scores of false religions that assert that there are many paths to heaven and many gods to worship. Unfortunately, their footprints can be just as easily identified in many churches today, too. Many such wolves ravage souls and shred biblical doctrine by teaching anti-gospel heresies: salvation is by good works, giving money to God ensures miracles, and you can have anything in life if you “name it and claim it.”

True believers must utilize the “sensor camera” of discernment to identify and expose such teaching and teachers: “Beloved, do not believe every spirit, but test the spirits to see whether they are from God, for many false prophets have gone out into the world” (1 John 4:1; cf. Ephesians 5:11).

There were no defenses in place to prevent coyotes from migrating to New York City, and the creatures deemed the city to be a sanctuary. And when no precautions are taken against spiritual wolves, they will migrate to our churches and find a home in our sanctuaries. Christian, watch out for wolves:

“I appeal to you, brothers, to watch out for those who cause divisions and create obstacles contrary to the doctrine that you have been taught; avoid them. For such persons do not serve our Lord Christ, but their own appetites, and by smooth talk and flattery they deceive the hearts of the naive” (Romans 16:17-18).

This Week’s Truths: Unwanted exposure

By Gary Miller

I’ve really enjoyed the unseasonably warm January weather. I wouldn’t mind if the whole winter felt like this. It has allowed me to do a bunch of stuff outside in comfort. One of things I’m getting ready to do is head back into the deer woods. I want to spend a few hours perusing the land to learn what I can about last the previous season. I want to see where the bucks spent most of their time, where the most scrapes were, and of course how I can apply that to the next deer season. As I have mentioned many times before, one can learn so much when the leaves are off the trees and the season is over. There is no pressure. There’s no time limit. There’s no one thing that takes priority. There are just opportunities to learn and grow. And there’s no better time to do a full investigation than when the woods are stripped down to their bare frame. Everything is exposed. Everything is open. And while everything seems dead, the ground is just preparing for another season of life. This sounds too much like you and me – and life.

As I write this, I think about many of you who would describe your present season as one of a bare frame. No leaves of life. No fruit of flourishing. Because of some circumstance or situation, you feel exposed to the world. You feel open for all to see the crooked limbs that stress shaped and trauma twisted. So, what do we do when this unwanted season of exposure comes our way? We find the signs of God. They will be there just as they have always been. But now we will be able to see them more clearly. And when we do that, we can return to our spring sooner. God does not always remove the leaves to correct us, but to help us see where He wants us to be more quickly, so that we can get back to the thriving life He has for all of us.

Sudoku Puzzle

How it Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle! Good Luck! ANSWERS ON CLASSIFIED PAGE

As business owners, it’s easy to fall into the trap of waiting for the “perfect” moment, perfect timing, perfect plan, perfect conditions. The truth is, perfection often delays progress, and in today’s fast-paced business environment, forward movement matters more than flawlessness. Progress doesn’t have to mean a major overhaul. Sometimes it’s updating your hours to better serve customers, trying a new marketing approach, reorganizing your workspace, or testing a small idea you’ve been sitting on for months. These incremental changes build momentum, confidence, and growth over time. Perfection can be intimidating. It creates pressure and can lead to procrastination or burnout. Progress, on the other hand, allows room to learn, adapt, and improve along the way. Businesses that grow successfully aren’t always the ones with the best plan; they’re the ones willing to take action and adjust as needed. At the Chamber, we encourage our members to focus on consistent improvement rather than unrealistic standards. Use available resources, lean on your network, ask questions, and don’t be afraid to try something new. Every step forward no matter how small, adds value to your business and strengthens our local economy. Remember, success isn’t built overnight. It’s built through steady progress, learning from experience, and showing up every day committed to moving forward. Progress over perfection, because done is better than delayed.

Hoosier girls say connecting with others is essential - Dubois Co. CARES

Hoosier girls yearn for positive social connections, and they want adults to help them achieve them. Those are two takeaways from the 2025 Indiana Girl Report, which came out in the fall. The third annual report comes from the Girl Scouts Coalition of Indiana and the Indiana Youth Institute. In 2025, report organizers spoke with 91 girls in nine listening sessions across Indiana and got input from 130 caregivers and youth professionals. “There is an increasing urgency to address the mental health of girls by increasing their social time and leveraging positive social connections as protective factors,” the report says. One mental health professional from southern Indiana was quoted as saying, “I don’t worry about the girls that are connected to youth-serving organizations. I worry about the girls that aren’t.” Those who gathered statistics for the document found that girls experience bullying at double the rate and cyberbullying at triple the rate of boys. Sexual violence affects girls four and a half times the rate of boys. Furthermore, in 2024, the likelihood of seventh- to 12th-grade girls experiencing serious mental health challenges was twice that of boys.

Girls average 5.3 hours on social media a day, nearly an hour more than boys. Out of curiosity, CARES asked some of its youth leaders – all high-school students – how much time they spend on social media a day, and how that compares to in-person connecting. Daily hours online ranged from one to six, with most reporting three or four. A couple of the girls said they spend equal time connecting online as they do in person, but most reported doing 80 to 90 percent of their connecting in person. The report notes that social media perpetuates body dissatisfaction, social comparison and low self-esteem among adolescent girls. Local girls acknowledged that they have been encouraged by peers on social media to skip homework for hangouts, to make fun of someone, to join in on bullying, to consume alcohol and drugs, to gossip about someone and to look a certain way or believe in certain things. On the other hand, according to the report, through healthy peer relationships, teens build empathy, cooperation and problem-solving skills. They are more likely to engage in community service, school and athletic participation. Teens also can make safer decisions and reduce risky behaviors.

Social media isn’t all bad, of course. Among other things, digital platforms serve as social lifelines for girls who feel isolated. The benefits are measurable: 80 percent of adolescents report that social media keeps them connected to friends’ lives, 71 percent say it offers a place to showcase their creativity, 67 percent find people who support them through tough times and 58 percent feel more accepted. For some young people, these platforms promote self-care behaviors and serve as gateways to mental health care. According to the report, girls “want help resisting the pull to be constantly online ... not the elimination of tools that provide genuine connection.” “Supporting students isn’t just about setting rules around social media,” commented CARES Director Candy Neal. “It’s about helping them learn how to use it in healthy ways. When we guide our youth in managing their online interactions, building face-to-face relationships, practicing empathy and working through problems together, we give them skills they’ll use both online and offline.” When asked how adults can help them manage their use of social media, Dubois County girls had these suggestions: Offer more peer-based learning or more one-on-one time with us. Talk with us more so we feel seen. Encourage us to do other things to help us limit our time on devices. Encourage us to establish face-to-face communication. Create other things for us to do, such as family game nights, going to the park and going to get ice cream. The report’s recommendations for how adults can get more involved in supporting adolescent girls can be found on the CARES website, at DuboisCountyCARES.org. The Dubois County Coalition for Adolescent Resilience and Empowerment Strategies has student clubs at all of the local high schools and works through them, community activities and a variety of resources for the betterment of adolescents. SENIOR SAFETY

Common financial scams that target seniors

Financial scams are as old as the concept of currency. But consumers’ vulnerability to scams has seemingly increased in the twenty-first century, when the Internet and devices like smartphones have enabled scammers to gain access to potential victims’ financial information and even gain virtual entry into their homes.

Seniors are targeted by financial scammers with such frequency that the term “elder fraud” has entered the English lexicon and is now widely recognized as a notable threat to individuals age 60 and older. In recognition of that threat, the Elder Justice Initiative aims to support and coordinate U.S. Department of Justice efforts to combat financial fraud that targets older adults. Those efforts are ongoing and include a number of initiatives to educate older adults about elder fraud, including warning seniors about some notable scams that criminals use to target older adults.

• Social Security Administration Impostor Scam: When perpetrating this scam, criminals typically contact prospective victims via telephone and falsely claim that suspicious activity has prompted the suspension of their Social Security number. Scammers may also indicate money must be withdrawn from a potential victim’s bank and stored on gift cards for security’s sake. It’s important to note caller ID spoofing is often utilized when perpetrating this scam so an incoming call appears to be coming from the Social Security Administration.

• Tech Support Scam: This scam involves criminals claiming to be representatives from widely recognized companies who are calling to inform seniors that viruses or malware have been detected on their devices. Some also may claim a target’s computer has been hacked. The Federal Trade Commission notes perpetrators of this scam pretend to be tech support and request victims enable them to remotely access their devices or computer. Granting such access provides an avenue to view sensitive information, but scammers also may diagnose nonexistent problems and charge a fee. But the scam does not always stop there. Some call back later and offer a refund to account for services that can no longer be rendered or to correct an overcharge. The scammers then request victims’ specific banking details under the guise of “correcting” these alleged oversights.

• Lottery Scam: The lottery scam involves scammers calling potential victims and informing them they have won a foreign lottery or sweepstakes. Perpetrators of this scam typically identify themselves as lawyers, customs officials or lottery representatives. The telemarketers behind this scam may be based in Jamaica, but the U.S. Embassy in Jamaica warns that those behind the scam will ask winners to pay various fees, including shipping and customs duties, until victims’ funds are exhausted.

• Romance Scam: The FTC warns that wildly popular dating sites, social networking platforms and chat rooms provide opportunities for scammers to identify and exploit potential victims. The aim of these scams, which many victims are too ashamed to report even after they realize they’ve been victimized, is to convince targets to send money in the name of love. But the EJI warns that online love interests who ask for money are almost certainly scam artists. These are just a handful of the many ways that modern scammers target seniors. More information about these and other scams is available at justice.gov/elderjustice.

SENIOR CARE

The unpaid Caregiver

Caregivers provide care to their patients so they can overcome illness or injury, or to support individuals plagued by chronic conditions.

Caregivers may be paid professionals who are employed in the medical field, but many are friends and family members who step up when needed.

The Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health reports there are 53 million unpaid caregivers providing care for loved ones in the home across the United States.

It is estimated these people provide more than $870 billion a year in service to society in terms of caring for others.

Recently, Statistics Canada estimated that 13.4 million Canadians age 15 or older (42 percent of the population) provided unpaid care to either children or dependent adults.

Unpaid caregivers have been called upon more readily due to certain factors, namely that people are living longer and there are limited resources available to provide care.

The cost of long-term professional care is out of reach for many families when services are not covered by private insurance or government-subsidized health programs.

SENIOR LIVING

Making friends in your golden years

Aging and change go hand in hand. Physical changes associated with aging, such as graying hair or reduced muscle mass, may garner the most attention. But personal relationships also can change as people age.

As a person ages, interests could change and home base may not be what it once was. People move after retirement, and friends you might once have seen with frequency may no longer be as close by. Children are older, and the friends you made from these early parenthood relationships may change as well.

It is important to have a solid group of friends. Psychology Today reports that a strong social network reduces the risk of early death by around 45 percent. Recent data even indicates that loneliness is as great a health risk as smoking half a pack of cigarettes per day. Starting fresh and making friends at 50 or older might seem challenging. Although making new friends after 50 may take more effort than it did when you were younger, it is certainly not impossible. Here are some tips for making friends after 50.

• Join a networking group. Networking isn’t just for advancing your career. Networking groups that focus on friendships can help individuals meet one another. Perhaps there is a neighborhood group in which people from a particular housing development or several streets in town get together? Shared interests can include the place where you live.

• Organize a get-together. Sometimes making friends involves effort on your part. You might need to step out of your comfort zone and initiate first contact with others. Maybe there is a person at a store you run into frequently, or someone whose path you cross regularly that can be asked out to a get-together?

• Get involved with activities. A church group or a volunteer activity can be a great place to meet new people. In fact, volunteers often get involved for the express purpose of getting to know others and to be integral members of the community.

• Consider other generations. Friends need not be the same age and from the same generation. Keep an open mind that friends can come in all ages and from all walks of life.

Making friends after 50 requires some effort, but a sizable social network can benefit individual well-being into one’s golden years.

SENIOR FINANCES

Outliving retirement savings

A recent report from the senior care experts at Seniorly indicated that millions of retirees are in jeopardy of outliving their retirement savings. The Seniorly report tabulated projected retirement income and expenses starting at age 65, and found that the average American retiree can expect roughly $762,000 in income generated from government-sponsored plans like Social Security, savings and investments. But the expected living expenses of such individuals was determined to be $877,000, meaning the average retiree may have a shortfall of $115,000. Retirement savings shortfalls also are a cause for concern in Canada, where 59 percent of Canadians indicated they fear they will outlive their savings in a 2025 CPP Investments Retirement Survey. Projections like those from Seniorly and the fears expressed by Canadians concerned by a potential shortfall of retirement savings underscore the need to prioritize saving for life after working, which can have short-term benefits as well. In fact, 49 percent of Canadians who expected to utilize the Canada Pension Plan reported lower levels of stress as a result of their commitment to retirement planning.

Hemp roots offer new opportunities for farmers and cancer research

By: Maribel Alonso
arspress@usda.gov

In a groundbreaking study, scientists at the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Agricultural Research Service (ARS) redefined the value of roots in industrial hemp, providing new opportunities for industrial hemp growers and opening new avenues for pediatric cancer research.

While the above ground part of Cannabis sativa L. plants, or industrial hemp, is widely recognized for its broad range of uses, including fiber production and grain (as a source of protein and oil), its roots have often been unutilized. This is because, until now, they were not considered to hold significant value.

Dr. Korey Brownstein, a research chemist with the National Center for Agricultural Utilization Research in Peoria, IL, noticed a strange substance showing up in his analysis as he was studying the chemical composition of hemp roots. Intrigued by these findings, Brownstein led a team of researchers to further investigate and analyze this chemical substance to determine its precise structure.

The analysis showed the substance was multiple compounds (four in total) that researchers predicted through structural modeling to be neolignans – natural products with similar structures formed during the plant’s biological processes. Although molecules with similar properties have also been found in other plants, such as paper mulberries and a tree native to Sumatra and the Malay Peninsula, this is the first time such molecules have been isolated from hemp roots.

The research team spent three years isolating and purifying these compounds—a process they described as ‘complex and increasingly difficult.’ Due to potential activities of the molecules, the researchers were determined to understand their nature and uncover the complete narrative behind them.

The team also collaborated with scientists at the Pediatric Oncology Laboratory at the University of Illinois College of Medicine Peoria, where a team of researchers found that these molecules showed moderate activity in killing pediatric cancer cells (cytotoxic effect) in the laboratory setting. Refining and understanding the effect of this molecule on pediatric cancers will open new alternatives for children’s cancers that are unresponsive to current therapies.

“We believe this new discovery offers industrial hemp growers a potential new revenue stream from a part of the plant that was previously overlooked,” said Brownstein. “Unlike crops such as corn or soybeans, which have multiple uses, hemp has been limited in scope. But if we treat hemp as a multi-use crop, we can expand its applications and market—paper, grain, fiber, and now, potentially, pharmaceutical compounds from the roots. The discovery of these compounds adds value to this commodity.”

The findings, published in a peer-reviewed journal, marked the first time these specific neolignans have been isolated from hemp and linked to possessing cytotoxic effects on pediatric cancer cell lines.

The team’s next steps include scaling up compound extraction for larger, more controlled functional studies. They aim to explore a broad array of cancer cell lines to assess the therapeutic potential of these neolignans in greater depth.

“This is about opening new doors,” Brownstein emphasized. “We’re expanding the possibilities for using the whole industrial hemp plant. By adding value to the roots, we’re giving farmers more stability and more reasons to invest in this emerging crop.”

A new spring wheat germplasm promises to reduce economic losses caused by fusarium

By Maribel Alonso
Maribel.Alonso@usda.gov

Researchers at USDA’s Agricultural Research Service (ARS) are helping American wheat farmers fight a devastating crop disease.

Researchers released a new spring wheat germplasm line with resistance to Fusarium head blight. This challenging fungal disease leads to significant annual economic losses in cereal crop production, estimated at $2.7B over the period from 1998 to 2000, and poses health risks to consumers.

Fusarium head blight (FHB), or scab, is the number one fungal disease impacting small-grain cereal production in the U.S., particularly wheat and barley. The primary cause of the disease is the fungus Fusarium graminearum L., although it can also be triggered by multiple strains or species of Fusarium.

FHB pathogens produce a toxin that contaminates the grain and flour, leading to production losses as it poses health risks for humans and animals. Over the years, it has become clear to farmers, researchers, and breeders that the most effective way to control this disastrous disease is by enhancing cereal crops with genes that show resistance to FHB. However, the source of effective resistance to FHB is currently limited in wheat and barley. Therefore, there is an urgent need to find new resistance genes that could be used to fight the disease, especially in durum wheat and barley.

In a scientific breakthrough led by ARS Research Geneticist Xiwen Cai with the Wheat, Sorghum, and Forage Research Unit in Lincoln, NE, scientists at ARS and the North Dakota Agricultural Experiment Station leveraged insights from previously published studies to develop a new spring wheat germplasm line named ‘WGC002.’ This germplasm carries a novel gene [Fhb7The2] found in wild grass that provides significant resistance to Fusarium under diverse environments. The scientists used plant breeding techniques to select genes with the desired traits from wild grass in their breeding lines, which have now been successfully integrated into different market classes of U.S. wheat.

“This is a significant discovery because there are very few resistance genes currently available.

This marks the first effective FHB resistance gene identified in wild species that has been bred into spring, winter, and durum wheat,” said Cai. “Moreover, this gene exhibits what we refer to as an additive effect, meaning it enhances and strengthens the resistance level of another gene.”

WGC002 Spring Wheat Germplasm has already been utilized by many wheat breeding programs locally and around the world. ARS scientists in Lincoln, NE, have now been deploying this novel FHB resistance gene in elite varieties of winter, spring, and durum wheat.

Scientists anticipate a substantial reduction in U.S. economic losses from wheat crops affected by FHB within just a few years if farmers begin growing new varieties with this resistance gene.

WGC002 was developed with financial support from the Agriculture and Food Research Initiative, the USDA National Institute of Food and Agriculture, the US Wheat & Barley Scab Initiative, and USDA-ARS CRIS Project.

This research was part of a series of collaborative studies conducted by ARS scientists and partners to identify FHB resistant genes in wheat and wild relatives. Multiple genes have been found to be resistant to FHB, but only two of them [Fhb1 and Fhb7] have been used and characterized as effective sources of resistance in breeding for wheat variety development. Selecting multiple genes simultaneously to provide robust and durable resistance is a common and effective practice in this effort.

The Agricultural Research Service is the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s chief scientific in-house research agency.

Daily, ARS focuses on solutions to agricultural problems affecting America. Each dollar invested in U.S. agricultural research results in $20 of economic impact.

Dubois County Organizations Celebrating America 250 to meet January 22nd

Dubois County’s America 250 Committee will meet on Thursday January 22nd at 6PM at the Jasper Public Library Hickory Room. The focus of those organizations attending is to coordinate activities to most effectively use resources. The group has already had 5 successful meetings where ideas were shared. There has been discussion about planned and potential activities, including quilting, the planting of Liberty Trees, fireworks and drones events, coordination of community church bell ringing, 18th Century reenactments, reenactment of ‘Tousant Dubois’ life, public reading of the Declaration of Independence, and Community Meals, to mention a few. The mission of America 250 is to commemorate the United States of America’s 250th

Anniversary this year by planning events, projects, and celebrations. Local organizations possibly benefiting from attendance include veterans’ groups, DAR, SAR, scouting, 4-H, service clubs, Chamber of Commerce members, public libraries, historical groups, local government, and interested local citizens. The Indiana State Semiquincentennial Commission appointed the Dubois County Historical Society to be the County Connect Leader, assisting with communications between local groups and the State Commission. Local events can be listed on the statewide website, <https://www.in.gov/usa250> For more information, contact Dubois County Historical Society president Gary Eck at geck@eck-mundy.com or 812-634-8001 (work).

Schroeder seeking re-election for Dubois County prosecutor

Dubois County, Indiana — Republican Beth E. Schroeder has announced her candidacy for re-election as Dubois County Prosecutor. She officially filed to seek re-election for the office on January 8, 2026. Schroeder, 39, has dedicated her entire legal career to serving Dubois County as a prosecutor. She started with the office as a deputy prosecutor in

Beth E. Schroeder

2011, was promoted to chief deputy prosecutor in 2015, and began her first term as elected prosecutor in 2023. Beth says her goal has always been to protect the safety of the citizens of Dubois County, as well as to protect the rights of victims of crimes. “If I am re-elected to serve another term as prosecutor of Dubois County, I will continue to do everything in my power to make our community safer. I will continue to work to provide opportunities for individuals who seek rehabilitation, but will be firm in my efforts to keep the public safe from those who cannot or choose not to be rehabilitated.” Beth grew up in Dubois County and graduated from Jasper High School in 2004. She received a bachelor’s degree in business administration from the University of Evansville in 2007. She graduated summa cum laude from the University of Louisville Brandeis School of Law in 2011, ranking second in her class. She resides in Jasper with her family.

The banner is divided into five sections. On the far left is a portrait of Marilyn Wells, a woman with brown hair, smiling. Next to her is a pink box with white text: "Online-only", "Live on-site", "Farm & Heavy Equipment", and "Business Liquidations". In the center is a black box with white text: "Illinois #2570", a gavel icon, and "TAYLOR Auction Co." in large serif font. To the right of the gavel icon is a yellow box with black text: "At your service for all of your auction needs". On the far right is a portrait of Zac Taylor, a man with a beard wearing a brown cowboy hat and jacket. Below his portrait is a black box with white text: "Zac Taylor" and "618-944-0086". At the bottom of the banner is a black bar with white text: "visit our website for Auction Calendar & Listings >>> www.taylorauction.net".

Deaconess Memorial Places temporary visitor restrictions as flu cases rise

In response to a steady increase in flu activity and RSV, Deaconess Memorial Medical Center, along with all Deaconess facilities, is joining several other hospitals across the Tri-State to begin temporary restrictions for visitors. Influenza-like illness reported by patients at hospital emergency departments in the area is on the rise.

These temporary visitor restrictions are being implemented to help limit exposure and spread of these illnesses and to help protect hospital patients and staff. These restrictions are in effect immediately. The restrictions include:

No visitors with symptoms of illness such as sudden onset of fever, cough, headache, muscle and joint pain, sore throat and runny nose.

No visitors under the age of 16. Visitors should check the hospital's website or call the facility in advance to learn more about its specific restrictions and any exceptions.

The policy is designed to help protect the most vulnerable patients from respiratory viruses. As with any time of the year, a visitor who is not feeling well should stay home. Visitors should observe the standard practices of washing hands and covering coughs and sneezes when around others. Masks will be provided for guests by the facility.

Vaccines are currently available for flu, RSV (Respiratory syncytial virus) and COVID-19. Individuals should talk with their medical provider about vaccines and which ones are recommended for them based on age and other factors.

According to the CDC, the 2025-2026 flu season is the most severe in 25 years, but Deaconess Memorial is also seeing an uptick in hospitalizations from RSV and Covid-19. Vaccines may not prevent an infection but can help with symptom management.

Key Health Reminders:

- Thoroughly wash your hands
- If you are feeling ill, mask up/limit social gatherings
- Cover coughs and sneezes when around others
- Get tested when you exhibit symptoms

Special arrangements can be made with each facility to allow additional visitors or younger visitors based on circumstances, such as births or end of life.

ABOUT DEACONESS HEALTH SYSTEM: Deaconess Health System is a premiere provider of health care services to a population of more than 1.5 million in southwestern Indiana, western Kentucky and southeastern Illinois. The system – based in Evansville, Indiana – includes 22 hospitals – among them Deaconess Midtown Hospital, Deaconess Gateway Hospital, The Women's Hospital, Deaconess Henderson Hospital, Deaconess Memorial

Medical Center and numerous other hospital affiliates. Deaconess Clinic, a fully integrated multispecialty group featuring primary care physicians as well as top specialty doctors, provides patients with consistent and convenient care. Additional components include the Linda E. White Hospice House, a freestanding cancer center, urgent care facilities, near-site clinics, telemedicine, virtual visits, a network of preferred hospitals and doctors and multiple partnerships with other regional health care providers.
