IDPH reminds Illinoisans: It's time to get seasonal respiratory illness immunizations

SPRINGFIELD – The Illinois Department of Public Health (IDPH) is reminding Illinoisans that it is time to get immunizations against seasonal respiratory illnesses, like flu, COVID-19, and RSV. The reminder comes after IDPH Director Dr. Sameer Vohra received his annual flu and COVID-19 shots during a visit to the Winnebago County Health Department.

"The message today is simple and clear: the time to get your seasonal immunizations is now," said Director Vohra. "Respiratory illnesses like flu, COVID-19, and RSV will only get more prevalent in the weeks ahead. Getting protected now gives you the best chance of avoiding illness at the holidays and through the long winter months ahead. And it not only protect you, it also protect your family, your co-workers, and your community."

According to IDPH's Seasonal Respiratory Illness Dashboard, Illinois is currently seeing low levels of respiratory illness activity. But there are signs that flu is on the rise. Historically, acute respiratory illnesses increase significantly during the winter months, when people spend more time indoors, making it easier for such illnesses to spread.

Immunization remains the best form of protection against contracting seasonal respiratory illness, and can lessen the severity of illness if you do contract it. Other preventive steps you can take include:

Wash your hands frequently with soap and water - it is one of the most effective ways to reduce spread of illness.

Alcohol-based hand sanitizers are also effective if soap and water are not available.

Minimize close contact with sick people.

Stay home when you are ill.

When you are ill, allow a few feet of distance from others.

Cover coughs and sneezes with your elbow or tissue but not your hand.

When you are ill, you may also wear a surgical-type mask when around others.

Director Vohra gets annual flu/COVID-19 shots during visit to Winnebago County

In September, IDPH issued its fall respiratory virus immunization guidance for children, adults, and pregnant individuals. The fall immunization guidance was adopted by IDPH based on recommendations made by the Illinois Immunization Advisory Committee (IL-IAC), a group of 20 highly qualified experts spanning infectious diseases, pediatrics, family medicine, internal medicine, obstetrics and gynecology, nursing, pharmacy, and public health.

Director Vohra noted that individuals can get their shots for flu, COVID-19, and RSV (where recommended) at the same time, making it easier to get full protection against the most common seasonal illnesses. He also pointed out that it can take some time for immunizations to become fully effective, making it important to get the shots as soon as possible before seasonal illnesses become more prevalent, and ahead of large gatherings at the holidays.

The Director received his flu and COVID-19 shots on Tuesday, October 27, at the Winnebago County Health Department (WCHD). He and WCHD Administrator Dr. Sandra Martell were joined by representatives of many Rockford-area health care providers, who joined them in echoing the message of the importance of timely immunization against seasonal respiratory illness.

Southeastern Illinois College marketing team earns three regional awards

HARRISBURG, Ill. — Southeastern Illinois College's Marketing Department earned three Medallion Awards for excellence in marketing and communications at the National Council for Marketing & Public Relations (NCMPR) District 3 Conference held in early October in Madison, Wisconsin.

The annual Medallion Awards recognize outstanding marketing and public relations work among community and technical colleges across Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin, and Ontario, Canada.

SIC received one Gold and two Bronze Medallion Awards in the following categories:

Gold – Video Shorts (Single): "Behind the Wheel: Dustin's Story," produced in partnership with Camera Coalition and featuring SIC Commercial Driver's License (CDL) graduate Dustin Neace.

Bronze – Social Media Post or Story (Video): "The ASMR You Didn't Know You Needed," created by Regen Arnette of Harrisburg, a recent SIC graduate and former Marketing student worker. The video features Diesel Technology Instructor Robbie Lindhorst in a humorous take on the popular ASMR video trend.

Bronze – Logo Wear: The 2025-26 SIC T-shirt design, featuring the college's updated Freddie Falcon mascot and "Home of the Falcons" branding.

Chamber November luncheon to cover employment law update and sexual harassment prevention training

Join us on Tuesday, November 10, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at The 1914 @ The Citadel (5th Floor) for our November Membership Luncheon. This luncheon will provide additional networking time, a delicious meal from The Vault Café, and an informative program presented by Martin Parsons of Legal Advocacy.

Attendees will receive an overview of key employment and workplace laws scheduled to take effect in 2027, along with practical guidance for employers and organizations. Martin will also lead a comprehensive Sexual Harassment Prevention Training, covering employer responsibilities, reporting procedures, workplace expectations, and best practices for maintaining a respectful workplace. Participants will receive a Certificate of Completion for their personnel files.

Registration: $20 Members | $25 Non-Members

UK dietitians release first nutrition-focused guide for alpha-gal syndrome

By Jordan Strickler

Lexington, Ky.— A tick-borne food allergy that was almost unheard of years ago is now so common in Kentucky that many residents know someone living with it. To help patients, families, clinicians and the community make sense of it, registered dietitians at the University of Kentucky Martin-Gatton College of Agriculture, Food and Environment (CAFE) have published one of the first nutrition-focused guides to the condition.

The paper, "Nutritional considerations for alpha-gal syndrome: a mini-review," appeared in Frontiers in Allergy and was supported with funding from The Bill Gatton Foundation. Heather Norman-Burgdolf, Ph.D., assistant Extension director for Family and Consumer Sciences (FCS) and part of FCS Extension, and Anna Cason, also from FCS, played roles as second authors.

"Not only is it a new syndrome, it's also just one of a kind," said Abbigail Pace, Ph.D., UK Department of Dietetics and Human Nutrition assistant professor, one of The Bill Gatton Foundation Early-Career Professors and the paper's lead author. "That's why it's been challenging to really characterize it and get the information out there broadly."

Alpha-gal syndrome (AGS) is triggered by bites from certain ticks, most commonly the Lone Star tick in Kentucky. The bite sensitizes the body to a sugar called galactose-alpha-1,3-galactose, or "alpha-gal," found in the meat of most mammals — beef, pork, lamb, venison,

Notable Thanksgiving traditions

Thanksgiving is a family-centric holiday that revolves around the dinner table and encourages celebrants to acknowledge all that they have to be thankful for. Thanksgiving is celebrated in October in Canada and in November in the United States.

Many Thanksgiving traditions focus on community events and sumptuous feasts, but they don't stop there. Here are some of the more notable traditions people can embrace on this day of giving thanks.

• Roasting turkey: Many foods will grace the Thanksgiving dinner table, but turkey is the star of the show. Roasting remains the most popular way to cook a turkey, but deep-fried and even rotisserie turkey have become more popular in recent years.

• Watching the parade: Millions of people tune into the broadcast of Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, and many more line the streets of New York City to watch it in person. The Macy's parade was first held on November 27, 1924, and was only suspended for three years during World War II. The parade features musical events, special guests and pop culture balloons that navigate streets lined with skyscrapers.

• Turkey trotting: Believe it or not, wild turkeys can run at speeds up to 25 miles per hour in short bursts, according to Lake Erie Nature & Science Center. Perhaps inspired by these speedy birds, turkey trots are popular on Thanksgiving Day. People of all ages start the holiday by running or walking in these charity events.

• Watching football: Watching professional football on television is a popular Thanksgiving custom. The Detroit Lions and the Dallas Cowboys always host an afternoon game on Thanksgiving. Each year, the National Football League also schedules a third matchup in primetime featuring other teams. In 2026, the lineup features: Chicago Bears at Detroit Lions (1:00 p.m. ET), Philadelphia Eagles at Dallas Cowboys (4:00 p.m. ET) and Kansas City Chiefs at Buffalo Bills (8:20 p.m. ET).

• Early holiday decorating: Many households will decorate for Christmas immediately following the clearing of the Thanksgiving turkey from the table. Some may even decorate before guests arrive on Thanksgiving.

• Tuning into "A Charlie Brown Thanksgiving": Some families watch this beloved Charlie Brown television special the night before Thanksgiving, enjoying the movie's snack menu of jelly beans, popcorn and toast.

• Celebrate "Friendsgiving": People who may not have relatives close by often gather with close friends to commemorate friendships and express their gratitude for one another.

Thanksgiving marks the first holiday during the whirlwind celebratory season. It's filled with many traditions that people across the United States and Canada enjoy.

Setting Thanksgiving history straight

Thanksgiving is celebrated each fall and often serves as the entry point to the holiday season. Tradition plays a large role in Thanksgiving celebrations, as families incorporate many customs into their celebrations that some believe were once tied to the earliest Thanksgiving meals. But the truth about those customs is a lot murkier than celebrants may realize.

According to the Smithsonian National Museum of the American Indian, the "First Thanksgiving" features a romanticized depiction of a friendly harvest celebration between "Pilgrims" and "Indians." This altered account of what took place in the seventeenth century served as a foundational story that's been reinforced through the years. However, American Indians attest that the story is more complex than the prevailing narrative suggests. Here's a look at some of the inaccuracies that have been revealed regarding the "First Thanksgiving."

MYTH: The First Thanksgiving was the first time that settlers and Native nations interacted.

TRUTH: The Wampanoag and neighboring nations had been interacting with European explorers, traders and others for nearly 100 years prior to the English setters' arrival at the Wampanoag village of Patuxet in 1620.

MYTH: The American Indians' decision to assist the English settlers was based on friendship.

TRUTH: In reality, the Wampanoags' decision to help the English was more about forming political alliances than making friends. The Wampanoag were hoping to fend off attacks from rivals.

MYTH: The First Thanksgiving was repeated each year.

TRUTH: This initial meeting of peoples did not spark an annual tradition. There is no record of Pilgrims inviting the Wampanoag people to the harvest meal. The Wampanoag men likely came because they heard gunfire from a hunt and investigated. And the feast wasn't repeated. Historians note the relationship between the Wampanoag and Pilgrims ultimately deteriorated, culminating in King Philip's War.

MYTH: The 1621 gathering was the first American Thanksgiving.

FACT: Thanksgivings actually were religious events that took place before the 1621 gathering. History News Network says that Texans claim the first Thanksgiving in America actually occurred in a community near El Paso in 1598. Spanish explorer Juan de Onate was said to have held a Thanksgiving festival after leading hundreds of settlers on a 350-mile excursion across the Mexican desert.

MYTH: Turkey was on the menu for the harvest meal shared.

FACT: The meal likely consisted of venison, wild fowl and other locally available foods, like cranberries.

MYTH: Pilgrims dressed in black with buckles and black steeple hats.

FACT: Historian James W. Baker explains that these Pilgrim depictions were formed in the nineteenth century when black and buckles helped create an emblem of quaintness. In fact, the early Pilgrims did not dress in such garb, and wore colorful clothing throughout much of the week, reserving black for Sunday services.

Inaccuracies abound regarding the first Thanksgiving. Prevailing accounts present a romanticized view of relations between Pilgrims and the Wampanoag people that has persisted through the years. Shedding light on myths can spur new discussions about this beloved holiday.

I wonder is God for real? How's that possible when:

Octopuses dream and otters have a favorite rock they carry around in a little skin pocket and cows have best friends and bees are out there communicating the coordinates of flowers through dancing and they have regional dialects?

Cats are purring at frequencies associated with bone healing? Forests get absolutely incinerated and respond by growing flowers? Dolphins literally invent names for themselves and yell them across the ocean? Penguins are waddling around Antarctica looking for the perfect rock to give their partner?

Teresa LeNeave

CROWS REMEMBER YOUR FACE. THEY TELL OTHER CROWS ABOUT YOU. THEY TELL THEIR CHILDREN ABOUT YOU. YOU CAN HAVE GENERATIONAL BEEF WITH A BIRD. I NEED YOU TO UNDERSTAND THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THIS.

Goats have accents. Rats laugh when you tickle them. Elephants mourn their dead. Whales make songs and then OTHER WHALES LEARN THE SONG and suddenly everybody across the ocean is singing the new song.

Monarch butterflies are born knowing how to fly thousands of miles to a place they have never been.

Sea turtles hatch out of an egg, immediately sprint toward an ocean that they have never seen, disappear into it for like 3 decades and then somehow come back to the same beach they hatched on.

Birds can see colors that we humans can't see. There are colors out there right now that we don't even get to know about. There are sea slugs that eat algae and use the chloroplast/chlorophyll and then are just like... photosynthesizing. And they're super adorable.

There are mushrooms communicating underground. There are seeds sitting in the dirt for decades like "no actually I will wait. It's fine." Squirrels plant trees because they forget where they put their snacks. Relatable.

A caterpillar goes into a little bag that it creates itself and dissolves most of its body into organic goo and rearranges itself, grows wings and then leaves. Why is this not more beautifully terrifying to people? And you're telling me a tiny acorn knows how to become a huge tree? It just has a blueprint inside itself?

Your body started as one cell? One? And that cell divided itself into a brain that can think about its own existence and eyes that can look at stars and hands that can hold somebody else's hands and a heart that runs on electricity without you even asking it to? The iron in our blood was made inside a star??

We are walking around on a wet rock covered in bioluminescent oceans and singing whales and laughing rats and birds holding lifelong grudges and flowers exploding out of fire and somehow we're supposed to act like this is a normal place to live?

We're supposed to act like this is all just a random, accidental sequence of events?

What's more important: Character or Reputation?

Our lives are filled with hectic schedules, but we've only been given a certain number of days to accomplish what God wants us to do. Since the beginning, our Creator has provided a probationary period to each person to determine whom they will worship. The Biblical covenant salvation that Christ is offering to the world is real, but sadly there will be many who are too busy and thereby choose to separate themselves from Him eternally. Today is the day to seriously examine our priorities and realize that how we lived was more important than how well we landscaped our lawn, our popularity, or how much money we made.

I was driving past a cemetery the other day, and noticed someone placing flowers on a grave. I thought about what a powerful and positive influence this individual must have been for their loved ones to honor them. When it comes to those we have known that have passed on, what do you remember most about them? To take this thought even further, what would you want everyone to remember about you? The Charles Dickens story, "A Christmas Carol," reminds us that after we leave this life, those who knew us will always remember our deeds, our attitudes, and our words. It's true, we are all just one decision away from a completely different life.

Let us focus on our character instead of our reputation, because our character is who we really are, but our reputation is who people think we are. In Luke chapter 6, Jesus makes profound statements concerning how important it is for His followers to learn the difference between being just a decent person and someone who is governed by genuine spiritual love. The lessons that are learned from being willing to deeply examine our conscience are life-changing, to say the least. So, why are the masses not interested in cleaning out their mental closets and deep diving into their soul to face the reality of who they are? Because they are in denial, they are afraid of the truth because it's ugly, it's painful. They are not ready to let go of their arrogance and be transformed as Romans 12:2 explains it by the "renewing of the minds." So, where do we begin?

We must initiate and have a passionate desire to adjust, or it will never happen. It requires developing an awareness of God's presence, always being honest with Him, listening closely, and doing what He says. Sin is addicting and intoxicating and controls those who have become numb to its deception. Having a reverential fear of God is not cowering in terror, but it's comprehending that we are literally hurting Christ and disrespecting who He is. The danger is to come to the point where we do not care. The gracious Lord has a plan and destiny for everyone, a unique blueprint that is custom-designed for us to follow. However, His vision for us is not always automatically accomplished, as we have also been given freedom to choose how we will live. Each moment we make decisions to obey His desires or our own, and only when we make the choice to yield and surrender our will to His perfect will can He truly become our Lord and Master.

In closing, I want to share an idea with you about this column. I've been involved with ministry for over 40 years, and have been a freelance faith columnist since January 1, 2016, and I've never missed a week to provide thought-provoking content. Since then, the column has advanced into 38 states and numerous publications use my work for which I'm grateful, but what you don't know is that I do not receive compensation. I've always stood firm in my conviction that a laborer is worthy of his hire (I Timothy 5:18); however, I'm also not implying the newspapers are disrespecting me, or that they think these messages are not worth the price of a cheeseburger. They just don't have the extra money in their budgets to pay me. I sympathize with the financial struggles of this industry as technology is changing the way the younger generation keeps up with the news. So the idea is that I want to give you the reader (whether you are a business owner or an individual), an opportunity to sponsor this column, and I would be glad to include your information in my tagline. As I continue to pray about the future of this column, I've always appreciated your encouraging correspondence and for reading "Living On Purpose."

rabbit and squirrel among them — and in dairy products, gelatin, some medications and a long list of food additives.

"Unlike most food allergies, which are reactions to proteins, alpha-gal syndrome is a reaction to a carbohydrate," Pace said. "That distinction is part of what makes it so difficult to diagnose and manage."

An estimated 15,000 new cases are identified in the United States each year, according to the review, with many more believed to go undiagnosed. Kentucky, sitting in the heart of Lone Star tick range, is among the hardest-hit states.

"We're seeing such an explosion of it right now," Pace said. "You can ask a group of people, and several of them will say, 'Yes, I know someone with alpha-gal syndrome,' especially in rural areas. Kentucky is just inundated with it."

Reactions typically appear two to eight hours after exposure, a delay that separates AGS from most food allergies and often leaves patients waking in the middle of the night with hives, swelling or, in severe cases, anaphylaxis. The severity of a person's reaction can also be pushed higher by factors such as exercise, alcohol consumption, dietary fat intake, and use of non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs like ibuprofen.

AGS Guidance

Rather than a blanket recommendation to avoid all mammal products, the paper lays out a tiered elimination approach.

The first tier targets the highest-risk foods for someone with AGS: mammalian meats, especially fatty cuts. The second tier includes dairy, broths, gelatin, lard and other mammalian-derived ingredients. The third covers additives such as carrageenan, glycerin and magnesium stearate, which may or may not be sourced from mammals depending on the product. Highly sensitive patients may need to eliminate all three tiers; others can stop after one.

"There are people who have alpha-gal syndrome who don't necessarily react to dairy and other mammalian-based food ingredients," Pace said. "That gives people more options and a little more autonomy to create a diet that is reasonable for them in their lifestyle."

The safest protein sources include poultry, eggs, fish, seafood, beans, lentils, nuts and seeds. Some individuals with alpha-gal syndrome turn to less common proteins such as emu, ostrich and duck.

The review devotes substantial attention to label reading, an area where alpha-gal syndrome patients face unusual challenges. For example, chicken sausage may be packed in pork casing. "Plant-based" and "vegan" claims are not always reliable safety nets. Mammalian-derived ingredients also show up in everything from gel caps to gravy. The paper includes a reference table of common food additives that may contain alpha-gal.

Pace's core advice for anyone newly diagnosed is short: Be prepared, not scared.

"Do your research, communicate that you have a food allergy and that it's very serious, and bring your medication," Pace said. "Keep your EpiPen and antihistamine on you."

Because the syndrome touches diet, gastroenterology, dermatology and mental health—and because tick prevention is central to keeping it from worsening—the authors recommend a team-based approach that includes an allergist, a registered dietitian, a mental health provider and a tick-prevention expert. There is also hopeful evidence in the literature that, without additional tick bites, alpha-gal antibody levels can decline over time, and a small group of patients has been able to reintroduce mammalian products under medical supervision.

Kentucky is currently in peak tick season, and every life stage of the Lone Star tick, from larva to adult, can transmit alpha-gal sensitization.

Veterans Day: A History of Honor, Service and Sacrifice

Every November 11, Americans pause to recognize the men and women who have served in the United States Armed Forces. Veterans Day is more than a date on the calendar. It is a national tradition rooted in the end of World War I and a lasting tribute to the courage, dedication and sacrifices of military veterans throughout American history.

From Armistice Day to a National Holiday

The origins of Veterans Day date back to November 11, 1918, when an armistice between the Allied nations and Germany took effect, bringing an end to the fighting in World War I. The agreement became effective at 11 a.m. — the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month.

Although the formal peace treaty, the Treaty of Versailles, was not signed until June 28, 1919, November 11 became a powerful symbol of peace and the end of one of the most devastating conflicts in world history.

One year later, President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed November 11, 1919, the first Armistice Day. Wilson called for Americans to remember the heroism of those who died and to express gratitude for the opportunity to pursue peace and justice.

Early observances included parades, public meetings and moments of silence. Businesses were encouraged to suspend operations briefly beginning at 11 a.m. to honor the occasion.

In 1921, the United States dedicated the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery. The ceremony took place on November 11 and honored an unidentified American service member who died during World War I. The tomb became a lasting symbol of remembrance for those whose identities were never established.

Congress officially recognized November 11 as an annual observance in 1926. In 1938, legislation made Armistice Day a federal holiday dedicated to world peace and honoring World War I veterans.

Honoring Veterans of All Wars

As the United States entered World War II and later the Korean War, millions more Americans served in uniform. The growing number of veterans led to a broader understanding of the holiday's purpose.

Raymond Weeks of Birmingham, Alabama, helped promote the idea of honoring veterans of every American war. In 1947, he organized an Armistice Day celebration in Birmingham that included veterans from different military conflicts.

U.S. Representative Edward Rees of Kansas later introduced legislation to change the holiday's name from Armistice Day to Veterans Day.

On June 1, 1954, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed the legislation officially establishing Veterans Day as a day to honor American veterans of all wars. Eisenhower also called upon Americans to rededicate themselves to peace and established a national committee to coordinate the observance.

The change recognized that the sacrifices of American veterans extended far beyond World War I and deserved national recognition.

A Date That Returned to November 11

In 1968, Congress passed the Uniform Monday Holiday Act, which moved several federal holidays to Mondays to create more three-day weekends. Veterans Day was among those affected, and its observance moved to the fourth Monday in October beginning in 1971.

The change proved unpopular with many Americans who believed November 11 held special historical significance. Numerous states continued observing the holiday on its traditional date.

In 1975, President Gerald Ford signed legislation restoring Veterans Day to November 11, beginning in 1978. Since then, the holiday has remained on November 11 regardless of the day of the week.

Veterans Day Today

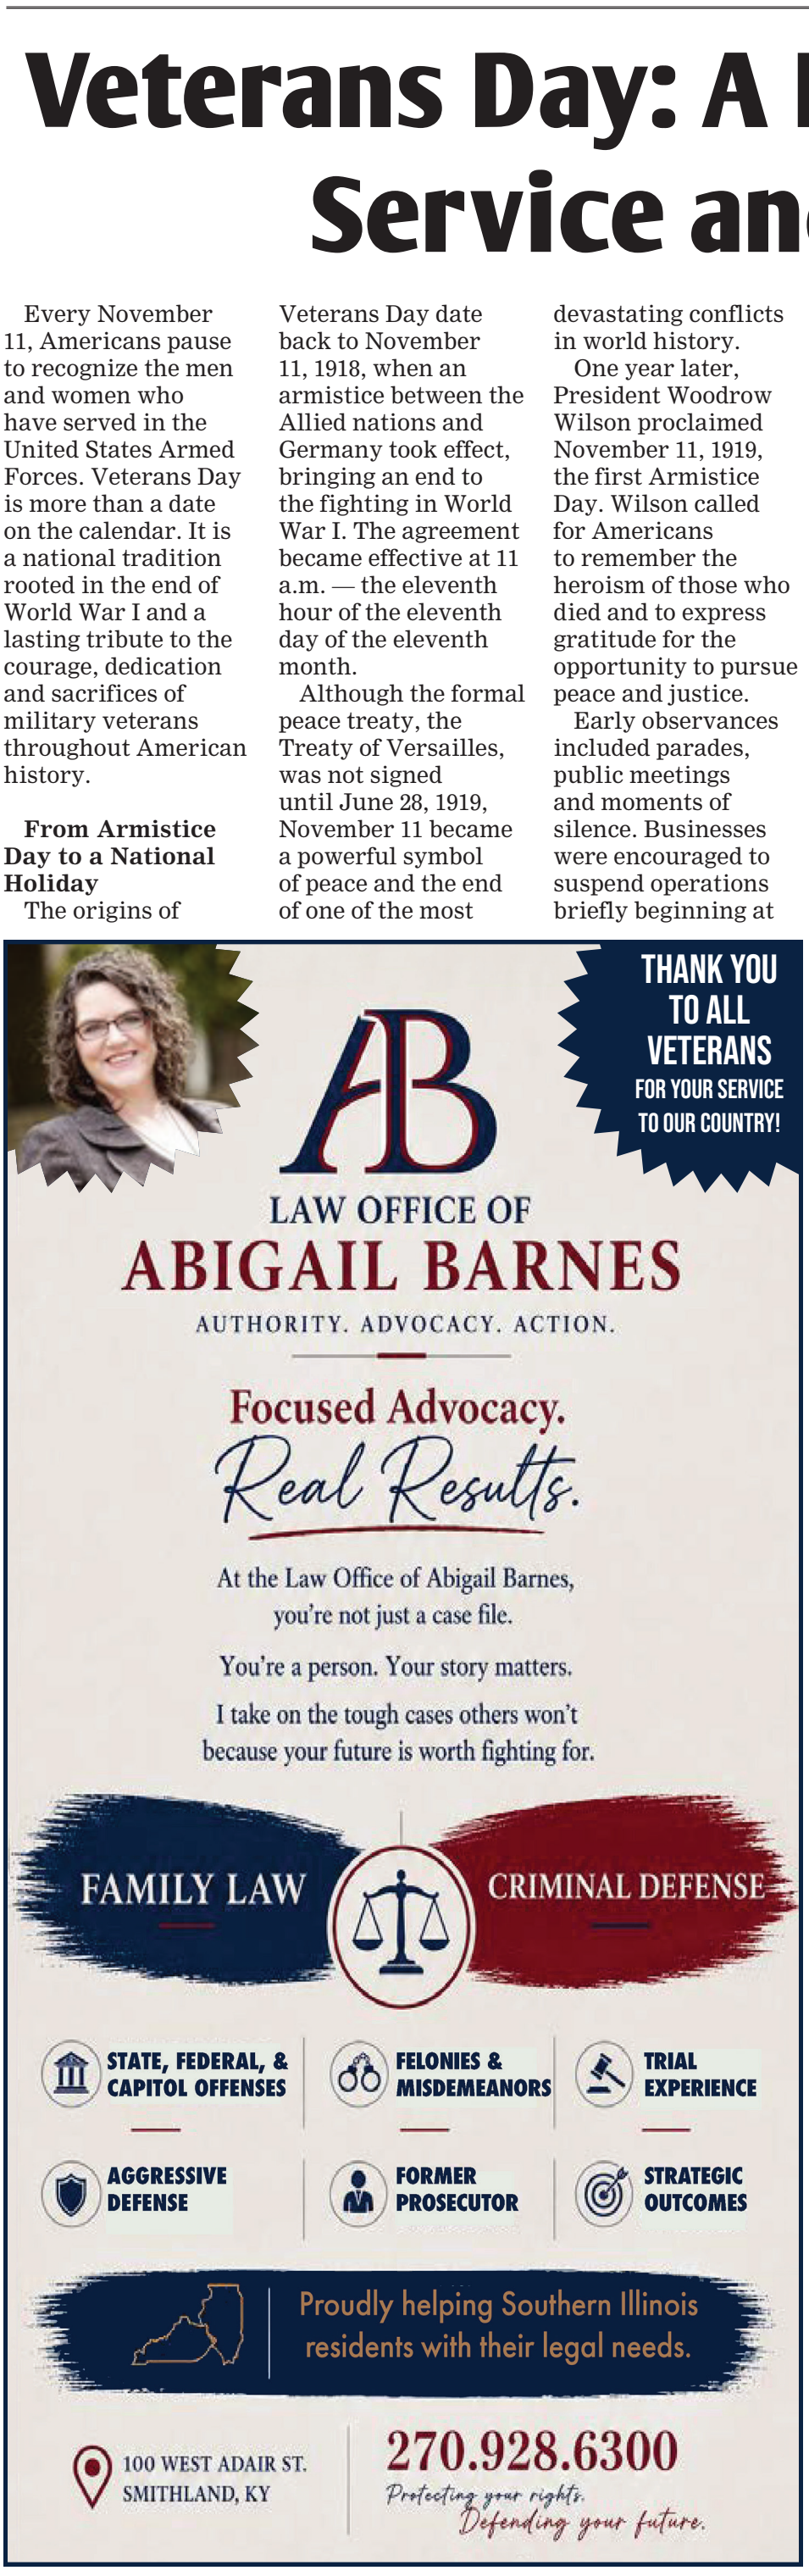

Today, Veterans Day is observed through ceremonies, parades, school programs, community gatherings and tributes across the country. The national ceremony takes place at Arlington National Cemetery, where a wreath is placed at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and military honors are rendered.

Communities also recognize veterans through appreciation events, educational programs and opportunities for residents to hear firsthand accounts of military service.

Veterans Day is often confused with Memorial Day, but the holidays have distinct purposes. Memorial Day honors military personnel who died while serving their country, while Veterans Day recognizes all who have served honorably in the U.S. Armed Forces, whether during wartime or peacetime.

The holiday also provides an opportunity to recognize veterans' contributions beyond military service, including their leadership, volunteerism and continued involvement in their communities.

More than a century after the first Armistice Day, November 11 remains a reminder of the importance of service, sacrifice and peace. By thanking veterans, learning their stories and recognizing their contributions, Americans help preserve the history and meaning of Veterans Day for future generations.

Notable monuments to visit across the United States

Veterans Day honors the millions of men and women who have sacrificed much to serve in the United States military. Veterans Day is commemorated each year on November 11 because it was that day in 1918 when an armistice was reached between combatants in World War I, which estimates suggest claimed the lives of as many as 22 million people.

There are many ways for Americans to celebrate veterans on Veterans Day. Visiting war memorials can instill a greater sense of appreciation for the men and women who have served in the United States military. The following are some notable war memorials honoring veterans across the United States.

Tomb of the Unknown Soldier

The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier is an iconic memorial located in Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Virginia. Cemetery officials note New York Congressman and World War I veteran Hamilton Fish, Jr., played an integral role in establishing the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by proposing legislation that provided for the internment of one unknown American soldier killed during WWI. Guards are now present at the tomb 24/7, and visitors, including U.S. presidents and foreign dignitaries, typically lay a wreath at the tomb to honor the sacrifices of all U.S. veterans.

Korean War Veterans Memorial

The Korean War Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. honors the roughly 1.5 million American veterans who fought alongside forces from the United Nations in a conflict that lasted from 1950 to 1953. Nineteen sculptures depicting U.S. servicemen on patrol during the conflict are among the many notable components of this moving memorial, which also features a wall and pool of remembrance that display the names of the more than 36,000 Americans killed during the Korean War.

Liberty Memorial

The Liberty Memorial in Kansas City, Missouri, was built in 1926 to honor the brave American service members who lost their lives in World War I. The Liberty Memorial, which is now known as the National World War I Museum and Memorial, is an iconic landmark in Kansas City that features the Liberty Memorial Tower, which rises 217 feet about Memorial Courtyard and 268 feet above the North Lawn. The top of the tower emits a flame at night to create a stunning visual. Memory Hall on the east side of the Liberty Memorial Tower containing a portion of the Panthéon de la Guerre, an iconic French painting that depicts the Allied nations of World War I.

USS Arizona Memorial

The USS Arizona Memorial in Honolulu, Hawaii, is dedicated to preserving the memories of the sacrifices of servicemen who fought in the Pacific theater throughout World War II. The memorial marks the resting place of more than 1,100 sailors during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, an event that led to U.S. involvement in World War II. The memorial is accessible exclusively by boat and the sunken remains of the battleship USS Arizona straddle the site.

These are just four of the many notable landmarks that commemorate the sacrifice and service of U.S. military members over the course of the nation's history.

‘Surviving the Farm Economy Downturn’:

UK agricultural economists offer new guidance in collaborative farmer resource

By Jennifer Elwell

LEXINGTON, Ky.— As farmers across the South face tightening margins, elevated production costs and uncertain markets, agricultural economists from the University of Kentucky Martin-Gatton College of Agriculture, Food and Environment (CAFE) are contributing practical guidance to help producers navigate the downturn.

Six of the 36 agricultural economists who contributed to the Southern Extension Risk Management Education Center (SRMEC) publication, titled “Surviving the Farm Economy Downturn: 2026 Update,” are based at Martin-Gatton CAFE.

“Our specialists covered topics from cattle markets and row-crop profitability to lender communication, bankruptcy, alternative crops, value-added marketing and long-term farm resilience,” said Jennifer Hunter, associate dean for Extension and director of the Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service. “Their contributions reflect the breadth of economic expertise available through the UK Extension.”

According to Jordan Shockley, Ph.D., an Extension professor in the Department of Agricultural Economics, the update builds on an earlier version that was developed 10 years ago, when Southern Extension economists saw a need for a coordinated regional resource. With another downturn emerging over the past two to three years, the group decided to update the publication for current conditions and add chapters reflecting new challenges facing producers.

“This is a great example of the working relationship we have in the Southern region,” Shockley said. “When issues arise for producers here, we get together and respond. The fact that we put this together in a couple of months shows the urgency of the issue and how close-knit and effective we are as economists in the Southeast.”

The SMREC publication, also supported by the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s National Institute of Food and Agriculture, includes 24 peer-reviewed articles with strategies to help producers weather the storm as commodity prices soften and production expenses remain high.

Across the update, several common themes emerge: Producers need to know their costs, communicate early with lenders, preserve liquidity, evaluate risk carefully, avoid short-term decisions that weaken long-term viability and build resilience before the next downturn arrives.

Southern agriculture, Shockley said, is uniquely diverse. Unlike parts of the Midwest, where corn and soybeans dominate, the South includes a broader mix of livestock operations and crops, including cotton, peanuts and rice. That diversity can provide some protection, but it also means producers face different levels of risk depending on their crop mix, input needs and market exposure.

“Farmers in some Southern states are facing extreme circumstances when it comes to profitability projections,” Shockley said. “Kentucky is fortunate because it has diverse agricultural production, and many of our farms are diverse as well. That helps. But some other states in the Southern region are not in that same position. When producers are choosing between rotations of corn, cotton and peanuts, and all of them are extremely negative from a profitability standpoint, it raises the question: What do you do?”

Those themes are reflected across the UK-authored and co-authored chapters, which address both immediate financial decisions and longer-term strategies for keeping farm businesses viable.

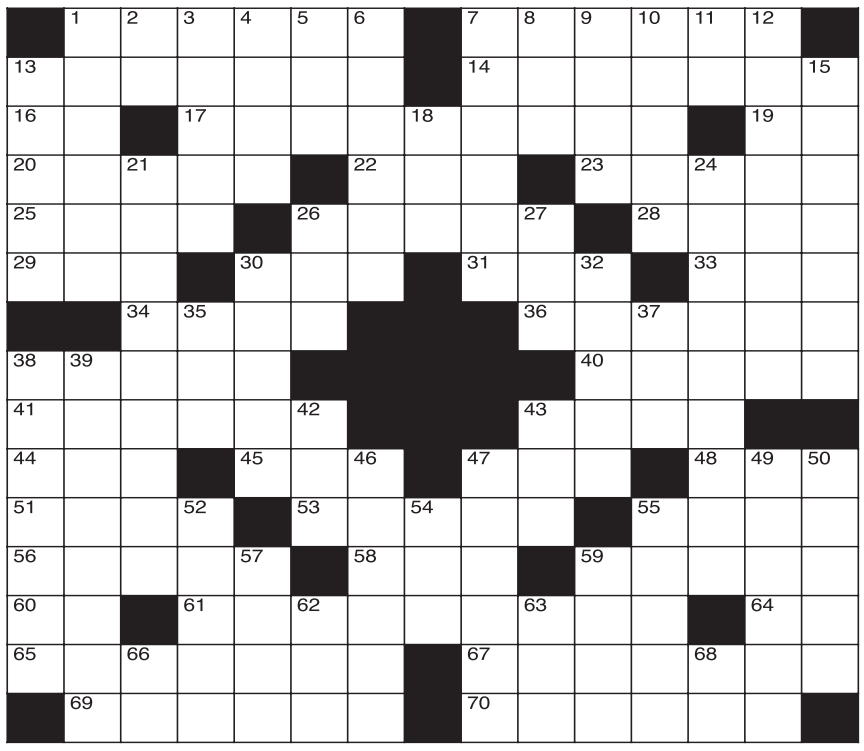

In addition to Shockley, UK contributors included Kenny Burdine, Grant Gardner, Jonathan Shepherd, Tyler Mark and Tim Woods. Together, their chapters address livestock markets, farm business strategies, row-crop profitability, lender relationships, bankruptcy, alternative crops, value-added marketing and long-term resilience.

Farmers and agricultural professionals can access the publication and related content through the Economic and Policy Update E-newsletter provided by the UK Department of Agricultural Economics at Martin-Gatton CAFE.

Pecan Pie makes a perfect dessert this Thanksgiving

A Thanksgiving dinner table can be a sight to behold. For foodies and others who love the array of comfort foods on display come the fourth Thursday in November, Thanksgiving is a day to circle on the calendar each year.

While a mouthwatering turkey and sides like mashed potatoes and stuffing garner the bulk of the attention on Thanksgiving, the dessert table also can be a tempting place to direct one's eyes. Though no dessert is off limits on Thanksgiving, pie is a particularly popular option on Turkey Day. With that in mind, those tasked with crafting something for dessert this Thanksgiving can consider the following recipe for "Pecan Pie" courtesy of Lines+Angles.

PECAN PIE
Makes 8 servings

1 9-inch unbaked frozen deep dish pie shell, thawed
1½ cups pecans, coarsely chopped
3 eggs, lightly beaten
1 cup light corn syrup
½ cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon molasses
2 tablespoons butter, melted
2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract

1. Preheat oven to 350 F.
2. Spread pecans along the bottom of the prepared pie shell.
3. In a large bowl, mix the remaining ingredients and pour over pecans. The pecans will rise to the surface of the pie.
4. Bake for 60 to 65 minutes until the filling has set. Pie is done when the center reaches 200 F. Pie center when lightly tapped should spring back. Remove pie from oven and let cool on a wire rack for at least 2 hours.
5. Serve.

Preparation time: 15 minutes
Cooking time: 1 hour, 5 minutes
Cooling time: 2 hours

Tips to simplify your Thanksgiving dinner

Thanksgiving is a much anticipated and beloved holiday. Celebrated on the second Monday in October in Canada and the fourth Thursday of November in the United States, Thanksgiving in each country offers families and friends an opportunity to gather and break bread together.

Food is indeed a focus of Thanksgiving in both Canada and the United States, and that can be a little overwhelming if not intimidating for those tasked with hosting the celebration. Guests might come to expect certain Thanksgiving staples, including turkey and mashed potatoes. Such expectations can make it easier to plan a Thanksgiving menu, and sticking to Turkey Day standard bearers is not the only way to simplify meal planning on this beloved holiday.

• Accept help, but keep it limited. It's customary for loved ones invited to Thanksgiving celebrations to offer to bring a dish to dinner, and that can alleviate some of the work hosts are tasked with managing. However, hosts can keep things simple by asking only a small handful of guests to prepare a side dish. Once the quota is filled, politely decline any additional offers to bring food. It can be hard to find space on the table if too many guests bring dishes from home, and that can lead to hurt feelings if certain sides are ignored or left on the kitchen counter due to a lack of real estate.

• Explain your desire to reduce food waste. Another way to simplify the meal is to avoid succumbing to the temptation to cook too much food. Guests may expect to go home with full bellies. Indeed, the Calorie Control Council notes that Americans consume between 3,000 and 4,500 calories during Thanksgiving celebrations. Such consumption is not only unhealthy for humans, but the planet as well. The U.S.-based nonprofit ReFED, which is devoted to stopping food waste, estimated that Americans would waste 312 million pounds of food on Thanksgiving 2023. Hosts who want to avoid cooking excessive amounts of food, much of which may eventually end up in the trash can, can simplify meal prep by cooking less and explaining to guests that they aspire to reduce food waste this Thanksgiving.

• Keep table settings simple. Unless you're planning to post photos of the family meal on Instagram this Thanksgiving, you can skip the more elaborate formal table settings in favor of a simple setup you might use on most nights when dining at home. Polishing the fancy silver and folding cloth napkins in a way that would impress a seasoned maître d' is a time-consuming task that can complicate meal preparation. Keep it simple with less formal settings, which will allow guests to direct their focus to the task at hand: eating a delicious, homecooked holiday meal.

• Purchase a premade dessert. It might be tempting to try your hand at a homemade dessert, but it's far easier to purchase pies and ice cream from a local farmer's market in the days leading up to Thanksgiving. This approach ensures hosts have it a little easier once the main course has been served and consumed.

Hosting Thanksgiving dinner is no small task. However, hosts can take various steps to simplify Thanksgiving meal planning this year.

Pumpkin pie is the classic holiday dessert

PUMPKIN PIE
Serves 8 for one 9-inch pie

For the crust:
1 cup butter, cold and cubed
2¼ cups all-purpose flour, plus extra as needed
1½ tablespoons maple sugar
1 pinch salt
1 medium egg, lightly beaten
2 teaspoons white vinegar
2 to 3 tablespoons iced water

For the filling:
1 small pumpkin, halved, seeded and cored
2 large eggs
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
⅓ cup maple sugar
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground ginger
1 pinch ground nutmeg
1 pinch ground cloves
¼ cup maple syrup
1 cup heavy cream

1. For the crust: Combine the butter, flour, maple sugar, and salt in a food processor. Pulse until the mixture resembles rough breadcrumbs.
2. Add the egg, vinegar and 1 tablespoon iced water. Pulse until the dough starts to form around the blades; add more water as needed if too dry, or a little more flour if too wet.
3. Turn out onto a lightly floured surface and shape into a disc. Wrap in parchment paper and chill for at least 1 hour.
4 .For the filling: Preheat the oven to 400 F. Place the pumpkin halves flesh-side down on a large baking sheet.
5. Roast for 30 to 40 minutes until the flesh is tender to the tip of a knife. Remove from the oven and let cool to one side.
6. Once the pumpkin is cool enough to handle, scoop out the flesh into a bowl and mash well until smooth.
7. Beat the eggs with the flour, maple sugar and ground spices in a large mixing bowl until pale and thick, about 3 minutes.
8. Gradually beat in 1½ cups of the pumpkin mash followed by the maple syrup and cream until fully incorporated.
9. Roll out the pastry on a lightly floured surface into a large round approximately ⅓-inch thick.
10. Drape into a 9-inch pie dish, pressing well into the base and sides. Cut away any excess pastry before crimping the edges with your fingers.
11. Gently prick the base all over with a fork before slowly pouring the filling into the lined pastry.
12. Bake for 20 minutes before reducing the oven to 350 F. Bake for a further 40 to 50 minutes until the filling is set and starting to come away from the edges of the pastry; a knife should come out clean from the center.
13. When ready, remove from the oven to a cooling rack. Let cool completely before serving.

Tip: If preparing in advance before serving, let the pie cool completely before wrapping in plastic wrap and chilling.

The story of "Taps"

The 24-note melancholy bugle call known as "taps" is thought to be a revision of a French bugle signal, called "tattoo," that notified soldiers to cease an evening's drinking and return to their garrisons. It was sounded an hour before the final bugle call to end the day by extinguishing fires and lights. The last five measures of the tattoo resemble taps.

The word "taps" is an alteration of the obsolete word "taptoo," derived from the Dutch "taptoe." Taptoe was the command — "Tap toe!" — to shut ("toe to") the "tap" of a keg.

The revision that gave us present-day taps was made during America's Civil War by Union Gen. Daniel Adams Butterfield, heading a brigade camped at Harrison Landing, Va., near Richmond. Up to that time, the U.S. Army's infantry call to end the day was the French final call, "L'Extinction des feux." Gen. Butterfield decided the "lights out" music was too formal to signal the day's end. One day in July 1862 he recalled the tattoo music and hummed a version of it to an aide, who wrote it down in music.

Butterfield then asked the brigade bugler, Oliver W. Norton, to play the notes and, after listening, lengthened and shortened them while keeping his original melody.

He ordered Norton to play this new call at the end of each day thereafter, instead of the regulation call. The music was heard and appreciated by other brigades, who asked for copies and adopted this bugle call. It was even adopted by Confederate buglers.

This music was made the official Army bugle call after the war, but not given the name "taps" until 1874.

The first time taps was played at a military funeral may also have been in Virginia soon after Butterfield composed it. Union Capt. John Tidball, head of an artillery battery, ordered it played for the burial of a cannoneer killed in action. Not wanting to reveal the battery's position in the woods to the enemy nearby, Tidball substituted taps for the traditional three rifle volleys fired over the grave. Taps was played at the funeral of Confederate Gen. Stonewall Jackson 10 months after it was composed. Army infantry regulations by 1891 required taps to be played at military funeral ceremonies.

Taps now is played by the military at burial and memorial services, to accompany the lowering of the flag and to signal the "lights out" command at day's end.

Tomb of the Unknown Soldier

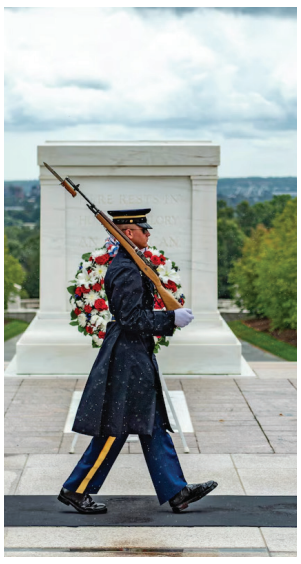

By Teresa Pearson

The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier is a historic monument dedicated to deceased U.S. service members whose remains have not been identified.

An unknown World War I American soldier was buried in Arlington National Cemetery in 1921. This site, on a hillside overlooking the Potomac River and the city of Washington, D.C., became the focal point of reverence for America's veterans.

Similar ceremonies occurred earlier in England and France, where an unknown soldier was buried in each nation's highest place of honor (in England, Westminster Abbey; in France, the Arc de Triomphe). These memorial gestures all took place on November 11.

On Memorial Day 1958, two more unidentified American war dead were brought from overseas and interred in the plaza beside the unknown soldier of World War I. One was killed in World War II, the other in the Korean War. In 1984, an unknown serviceman from the Vietnam War was placed alongside the others. The remains from Vietnam were exhumed May 14, 1998, identified as Air Force 1st Lt. Michael Joseph Blassie, and removed for burial. To honor these men, symbolic of all Americans who gave their lives in all wars, an Army honor guard, the 3rd U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard), keeps day and night vigil.
